Vicious Storms Join, Howl Through East

Doctors Wire Heart to Help Prolong Life

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — Jim Miller is an electrician by trade and—not quite literally—his work is in his heart.

It wasn't Jim, but a team of surgeons at the University of Washington Hospital in Seattle, who equipped Miller's heart with battery power.

A few months ago life was running out for Jim Miller. He had fainting spells, his vision was faulty, his feet were always cold. His wife, Mary, recalls that she carried his meals to him because walking to the table had become a major project.

Doctors diagnosed Miller's condition as a heart block. Electrical conduction was insufficient to make the heart beat properly. Instead of the normal 60 to 80 per minute, his pulse rate was down to 24.

Body Wired

Two tiny electrodes were sewn into Miller's heart muscles in a rare and delicate operation.

Much as Miller himself had installed doorbells, the surgeons strung wire through his body to a battery—a power pack that will operate about five years before a replacement is necessary.

This, too, is inside the body—a package about the size of a king-sized pack of cigarettes. It rests just under the skin, sending impulses to Miller's heart at the rate of 60 per minute.

Before he left the hospital the doctors put Miller on a treadmill as a final test. He walked with steady step and steady heart.

Walking to the table for dinner once more is merely an incident in the day for Jim Miller.

Pro-Lumumba Forces Plead For Cease-Fire

Suffer Severely During Fight With U.N. Nigerian Unit

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Congolese forces loyal to Patrice Lumumba appealed for a cease-fire after suffering "heavy casualties" bringing an end to fighting with U.N. Nigerian troops at Kindu, a U.N. spokesman reported today.

One Nigerian officer was killed and four of his men are missing in the clash that grew out of a brawl with drunken Congolese soldiers.

It broke out Thursday night when Congolese troops opened fire on a party of Nigerians at Kindu, a town in Lumumbist-controlled Kivu province.

The Nigerians returned the fire and killed six Congolese troops, the U.N. spokesman said.

Fighting Renewed

Fighting broke out again next morning when Congolese troops ambushed a Nigerian detachment and killed the Nigerian officer.

The 200 Nigerians then withdrew to their headquarters under the command of a British officer and were besieged by more than 1,500 Congolese troops for the rest of the day.

The Congolese poured mortar fire into the complex of buildings making up the headquarters but the U.N. said there were no further Nigerian casualties.

The U.N. spokesman said the Congolese suffered "heavy casualties" but was unable to give details of dead or wounded.

Around 5 p.m. yesterday the Congolese asked for a cease-fire which was immediately arranged, the spokesman said.

2 Men Attack Negro Minister

NEW YORK (AP) — A Negro minister, fighting extradition to South Carolina, was attacked outside Queens County Court-house yesterday by two white men he said threatened to lynch him.

Screams by the pastor's wife drew a crowd and the men fled.

The Rev. Walter M. Cavers, 51, said one of his assailants told him, "if you be quiet we won't kill you here. We're going to lynch you."

Cavers, who has been active in integration work, said a second man chimed in: "Don't kill him here. We'll kill him as soon as we get him out of here."

The minister said he and his wife were getting into their own car when the men appeared. Cavers was bruised but not seriously injured.

The two men, plus a man at the wheel of a station wagon, drove off when the crowd gathered.

Two Feet of Snow Falls In Widely Scattered Spots, Leaves Havoc, Traffic Snarls

NEW YORK—A blizzard formed by two separate storms that joined forces slammed into New England today, leaving near-paralysis in its wake and threatening additional havoc in its coming.

The storms merged in the New York state area last night after one had swept in from the Ohio Valley and the other had wallowed up from the east coast.

They left as much as two feet of snow at widely scattered points, shutting down airports, snarling traffic and generally disrupting transportation.

Poor visibility caused the collision last night of the passenger liner Nassau and the freighter Brott outside New York Harbor. Both vessels, outward bound, returned to their moorings in the harbor.

There were no injuries and only slight damage was reported.

In northern Utah, an all-out search was ordered for a light plane carrying a Maryland executive who took off from Salt Lake City and headed north into a snow storm.

Expect Foot

The pilot was William D. Ekley Jr., technical director of the All-gary Instrument Co. of Cumberland, Md. It was not known whether he was alone in the craft.

Forecasters said as much as a foot could be expected today as far north as southern Maine as the eastern blizzard wallows.

Slag Slide Kills Dozen

Belgian Hamlet Buried Under Flood of Cinders

MOULINS-SOUS-FLERON, Belgium (AP) — More than a dozen victims were believed entombed today beneath a flood of cinders from a huge slag heap that weakened under heavy rains and spilled into this tiny village last night.

A snowstorm swept over town before dawn, and with daylight the avalanche of cinders looked like a giant sand dune colored elephant gray. The town is in Belgium's coal mining district near Liege, located near some of Europe's oldest mines.

Officials estimated the death toll at 14 and a local police officer said: "Let's hope we are not overly optimistic." About six homes were swamped and 10 badly damaged. A butcher's shop was cut in half.

"Nothing But Tomb"

The local doctor's house was pushed 10 yards by the onrushing mass before it was finally swamped. A rescue worker gestured over the expanse of cinders and said: "It will be nothing but a tomb."

Last night a load of cinders from a nearby electric power plant was being piled at the top of the hill which looms over the small knot of houses along the road from Fleron to Jupille. A huge section of the big heap broke loose. It rolled down a long slope and across the road, finally coming to rest against a small hill.

King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola toured the village. At one point the young queen, married to Baudouin only last December, was offered an umbrella by a bystander. She declined, saying: "It rains for everyone. For me, too."

Milwaukee Clipper Docks After 20 Hours In Michigan Ice Pack

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Clipper docked here Friday night after spending 20 hours in a wind-driven ice pack outside the harbor entrance.

The Clipper came off the lake from Muskegon, Mich., Thursday night and tried to force its way through a four-foot icepack. An outboard car ferry finally broke a path for it Thursday night. The Clipper carried automobiles and three passengers.

The Weather Bureau, meanwhile, reported that the 15 to 25 mile an hour northeast winds that caused the four foot ice jam had switched to north and showed tendencies of becoming north to northwest by midday today. Such winds would clear the harbor entrance of the ice packs.

Only Change Ahead: From Cold to Colder

Five other ferries were caught in the ice jam for varying times earlier Friday but bucked their way through, discharged their freight took on more and smashed their way back out into the lake.

Brazil Returns Hijacked Ship to Portuguese Firm

Galvao Protests Alleged Violation of Agreement

RECIFE, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government turned the travel-stained Santa Maria back to Portugal today. Capt. Henrique Galvao's seagoing revolutionaries, now beached, protested that Brazil had welched on an agreement with the swashbuckling skipper.

A rebel spokesman at the police barracks — where Galvao now is quartered hoping to take up asylum in Brazil — told newsmen:

"We are shocked and taken by surprise at the attitude of the Brazilian government, since it signed a document with us guaranteeing that the Santa Maria would stay under the Brazilian flag."

The spokesman was incensed that the ship is going back to "the dictator Salazar." He referred to Portuguese Premier Antonio Salazar, whom Galvao has vowed to oppose from land now that his floating revolution has been yanked from under him. Portugal's government, however, is but an intermediary. It is turning the vessel back to the owners, the Colonial Navigation Co.

Galvao and 21 rebels were quartered in the police barracks.

Only 30 Rebels

The rebels were unsure of their future plans, although they have been promised political asylum in Brazil. Their main trouble is lack of money, but they plan to start a fund-raising campaign as soon as they can gain freedom.

There was a general atmosphere of astonishment among officials here at the realization that only about 30 rebels were aboard the ship yet they managed to keep more than a thousand passengers and crewmen in check for 12 days and nights. The band was originally reported to number 70.

A strange quiet settled over this tropical port after days of excitement and high sea drama. Navy men and correspondents who chased the ship through the South Atlantic prepared to leave.

Agents of the owners of the $16.6 million vessel, her stack blackened with soot and her air conditioning out of order, planned to head the ship from the harbor pool to the dock so passengers could retrieve their luggage.

$1 Million Needed For New Hospital

LA CROSSE (AP) — Lutheran Hospital authorities estimated today that it would cost about $1 million to replace the central section of the institution that was destroyed by a fire Thursday night.

A disaster evacuation plan worked smoothly to move 121 patients from the central wing and a connecting section to other wings of the hospital within 15 minutes after the fire started. No one was injured.

Fire Chief Adolph Kessel said that the cause of the fire had not been determined. It was suspected earlier that faulty wiring had started the blaze. This apparent was not the case, Kessel said, because the fire started in a first floor cupboard where there were no wires.

Anna Wong Victim of Heart Attack

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Anna May Wong, whose delicate Chinese beauty graced movie screens for more than three decades, is dead. She died of a heart attack Friday night at the age of 54.

Although American-born, she was a full-blooded Chinese and was among the first to bring the charm of the Orient to American movie theaters.

Her first starring role was opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "Thief of Baghdad" in 1924. Soon afterward she went to England and played opposite Laurence Olivier on the stage in "Circle of Chalk."

Film assignments in Berlin followed.

Miss Wong

Retired for 17 Years

By the early 1930s, when she returned to the United States under contract to Paramount, she was one of Hollywood's busiest actresses. It was during this era that she made a lengthy personal appearance tour of Europe, visiting all the important capitals.

In 1936 she went to China for the first time, remaining there a year.

When war came in 1941, Miss Wong retired from film and theatrical work and devoted all her time to United China Relief and USO activities.

Her retirement lasted 17 years, except for occasional television assignments. "Portrait in Black," her last feature film, was made a year ago and is now being shown.

Refugees Get Help From U.S.

Cubans Benefit By Broad Scale Kennedy Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has stepped in with a broad scale program to feed, clothe and help refugees from Fidel Castro's Cuba get started in a new life.

President Kennedy said yesterday $4 million from mutual security funds will be provided to keep the aid program rolling until the end of the current fiscal year June 30.

The nine-point relief program will be under the direction of Secretary of Welfare Abraham A. Ribicoff. It will combine direct federal assistance with help for voluntary aid groups:

1. Coordinating and assisting voluntary relief agencies in meeting the daily needs of refugees, resettling as many as possible and finding them jobs.
2. Obtaining assistance of both private and governmental agencies in supplying useful employment opportunities.
3. Supplying funds to resettle Cuban exiles in areas other than Florida, where about half of the 66,000 refugees are located.
4. Providing essential health services.
5. Helping meet the added costs of operating public schools hit by the impact of Cuban refugee children.
6. Starting educational and training programs for refugees, including physicians, teachers and others with professional backgrounds.
7. Providing financial aid and care for unaccompanied children.
8. Distributing surplus food to county facilities.
9. Providing financial help to meet basic maintenance requirements for needy refugee families in the Miami area.

Union, Company Avert Shutdown of Railroad

NEW YORK (AP) — A threatened shutdown of Long Island Rail Road passenger service was averted Friday night after a two-hour meeting of officials of the railroad and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The Brotherhood had called for a work stoppage to begin at 6 a.m. today, charging the line's rolling stock was unsafe. It also charged 60 per cent of the road's equipment was "inoperable."

The local citizenry, known to Givens, got together to let him stay in France next June.

The GI, incidentally, happens to be a mainstay on the local basketball team. He is SP4 John H. Givens, 24, of Milwaukee, Wis., stationed with the Army Aerial Support Center at nearby St. Andre, warmed up to his French surroundings almost from the moment he arrived in December 1959. It was through his basketball skill that he became acquainted in Pont l'Eveque.

Eats in Town

Givens had played on YMCA and high school basketball teams in Milwaukee and found a spot the sponsor of the Pont l'Eveque as a forward on the local Army basketball team.

The letter was sent to the American embassy in Paris and by 1960 got taken on as center or forward.

Local families set aside a room for him on game nights and he ate at the family table. His porter, "I don't know what French developed to the point say."

It Was a Long Wait and a cold one for many New Yorkers Friday night and early today as a big eastern snow storm hit New York City. This was the scene shortly after midnight on Fifth Avenue near 48th Street. By this morning people were waiting for transportation stalled by some eight inches of snow.

80,000 to be Idled At U. S. Auto Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Some 80,000 auto workers across the nation will be idled as a result of production cuts ordered by auto makers to bring output into line with swollen stocks of unsold 1961 model cars.

American Motors Corp. plans to lay off 1,800 more production workers permanently when work resumes Feb. 13 at its Milwaukee and Kenosha plants. Officials said Friday 1,200 would be dismissed at Kenosha and the remainder in Milwaukee.

Both AMC plants will be closed next week. Total production employment will be 18,539 at the two plants when work is resumed. There will be 11,174 in Kenosha and 6,825 in Milwaukee.

Ward's Automotive Reports said Ford will lay off 13,500 assembly line workers next week at Dearborn, Kansas City and St. Louis.

The trade paper said Ford would lay off men at engine factories in Cleveland and Lima, Ohio. However, a Ford spokesman in Cleveland said he understood a one-week layoff at Cleveland plants scheduled next week has been postponed.

AMA Knocks CBS TV for Recent Show

Caricature of Medicine Distortion, Group's Trustees Say

CHICAGO (AP)—The American Medical Association's trustees said Friday the Columbia Broadcasting System presented a "caricature of medicine and its aims" Thursday night on its television program CBS Reports.

In New York no CBS spokesman was immediately available.

The board met in Chicago and sent a letter to Dr. Frank Stanton, CBS president, accusing CBS of "misrepresentations, bias and distortions" in the show, titled "The Business of Health — Medicine, Money and Politics."

Two AMA officials appeared on the taped show, which also included statements by labor leaders, legislators and others. The program dealt mainly with health care plans and their financing, and medical care for the aged.

Profoundly Shocked

The AMA trustees said they were "profoundly shocked" at the program and consider it a "monumental travesty on the medical profession."

They said the AMA was not given an opportunity to develop its position that "the medical profession has always believed that every person, young or old, in need of medical care should get it, regardless of ability to pay."

"The AMA believes that any medical care plan is both unsound and unfair which would compel American working people to shoulder increased Social Security taxes to finance health costs of all those over 65, rich and poor alike, regardless of whether they want or need such help and which, at the same time, ignores millions of indigent elderly who do need help," said the trustees in a statement.

Historic Disservice

"We are amazed that a major national television network, with its grave responsibility to safeguard the truth in examining the great issues of the day, would permit such a distorted program to be presented in the guise of objective reporting."

"We believe that CBS has performed an historic disservice to the people of this country."

The trustees said "the real truth about the AMA's position on medical care lies on some CBS cutting room floor."

Dr. Leonard W. Larson, president-elect of the AMA, spent 5 hours taping questions and answers for the program. The trustees said, and a total of 4½ minutes out of the hour-long program was devoted to the AMA position.

The trustees also charged that the producer "selected the most unrepresentative quotes from AMA, twisted them out of context and positioned them in a manner most favorable to the friends of government medicine."

U. S. Firms Expected to Open More Units in Germany Unless Stopped

Home Recession Driving Merchants to Foreign Country Where Markets Expand

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — West Germany is a growing magnet for American business and—unless the Kennedy administration restricts them — U.S. firms are expected to open more and more subsidiary operations here in 1961.

One new U.S. firm has put down roots here every three weeks during the past two years, according to the American Chamber of Commerce in Germany.

"If the recession at home gets tougher," said influential American businessmen here, "there's only one thing many American companies can do to save their necks—get to Germany as fast as possible and into a market that's really expanding."

Whether the Kennedy administration will allow this trend to go on is the big question, and the recent flood of American capital to Europe probably will be held back for some months until Washington makes up its mind.

The establishment of operations in Europe by big American companies has been partly responsible for the drain on U. S. gold reserves.

The scope of this drain is indicated by Germany's giant Mannesmann Holding Corporation, which reports that in 1960, one half of all private U.S. investments made abroad were made in Europe and that Americans contributed 30 per cent of the total capital invested by foreigners in the common market area.

U. S. Investment

From 1955-59, 33.6 per cent of the $8.3 billion invested by Americans in the common market went to West Germany where they employed about half a million German workers at wages averaging 50 cents an hour.

So far the United States has acquired a third of all foreign-owned company share capital in Germany, and is the chief foreign shareholder in the Federal Republic, followed by Britain and the Netherlands.

In the past few years, 20 per cent of the annual American investments in Germany came from direct transfers from the United States, about 25 per cent from U.S. funds raised abroad, and 55 per cent from income earned in Germany and reinvested, officials of the American Chamber of Commerce in Germany report.

Petroleum Business

Many American firms with German subsidiaries are connected with the petroleum business, such as the Cologne branch of the Atlantic Refining Co. of Philadelphia, or with motors, such as Ford's Cologne branch or the General Motors Opel subsidiary in Rueselsheim.

A healthy share are associated with the wants of a gadget conscious society — National Cash Register, the Addressograph-Multigraph Corp. of Cleveland, Remington Rand in Frankfurt, the Container Corp. of America in Hamburg, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. turning out abrasives in Duesseldorf.

Small Outfits

Hundreds of others are small outfits making and selling everything from shoe polish and tanning equipment to cosmetics and brass screws.

Some of the businessmen associated with all these American firms say their low production costs allow them not only to sell missing biplane flown by World War I ace Charles Nungesser and Asian, African and South American markets now partially or totally closed to higher priced U.S. made goods.

Valentine Has Impact On Heart of U.S. Cities

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — With Feb. 14 only 10 days away, a little research reveals that towns named Valentine may be found in Arizona, Nebraska and Texas. And there's one in Virginia called Valentines.

Other appropriate postmarks, the Rustcraft Institute reported today, are Loves Park, Ill., Darling, Miss., and a Darling, Pa.; Lovelands in Oklahoma, Ohio, Colorado and Iowa; Loveville, Md.; Lovelock, Nev., and Paradise, Calif.

Also there are Courtland in Minnesota, Alabama, Kansas, Virginia, California and Mississippi; a Deary in Idaho, Lovell in Kansas, Lovelady in Texas, and just plain Loves in Kentucky. And there's Harmony in Pennsylvania.

Jap Trawler Seized At Indonesian Port

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese tuna trawler radioed the coast guard today that she was seized as a spy ship when she put in at Surabaya, Indonesia, to deliver two Indonesian fishermen she rescued from the sea 10 miles off Bali.

The Coast Guard said the 238-ton No. 8 Fuku Maru reported since Jan. 28 on a charge of engaging in espionage after a camera was found on one of the crewman. The captain asked the former Indonesian ministry to protect to the youngsters, reeled him in and gave him artificial respiration.

The Indonesians seized a Japanese whaler carrying 1,492 tons of frozen whale meat from the vessel a short time later.

Colored Phones Cause Trouble

White Instrument Now Status Symbol In Russian Town

WARSAW (AP) — A provincial Polish town is in turmoil with local Communist aristocracy battling over the latest status symbol—a white telephone.

The Communist party organ Trybuna Ludu gave this account of the battle in the town identified only as "B."

The director of communications received a shipment of 40 white telephones to be distributed in his area.

But there were far more people who were deeply convinced that their positions and social rank entitled them to the white "luxury" telephone.

The town began to seethe. Telephone calls began. The director was bombarded not only by the most important citizens but what is worse, by their wives. The possession of a white telephone became a matter of honor, ambition, prestige and importance.

The beleaguered director finally set up a special commission to decide on the allocation of the telephones and all but one were distributed.

"The debate over its distribution is still going on," the paper said. Many important people, however, did not get the badge of importance.

Trybuna Ludu said a number of disappointed wives have threatened their husbands with divorce and some dissatisfied local officials have carried the matter to influential friends in ministries in Warsaw.

"The director is a shadow of his former self," the paper said. "He avoids acquaintances. He has lost his appetite. He has nightmares in which he sees local aristocrats demanding telephones and threatening him with the most dire consequences."

He was last seen leaving town "on an official trip."

Debris From Sea Not Of Nungesser Plane

PARIS (AP) — The air ministry said today debris dug from the sea by U.S. fishermen did not come from the long missing "L'oiseau Blanc" (White Bird) that tried unsuccessfully to beat Charles A. Lindbergh's transatlantic flight in 1927.

An official examination of the debris shipped here established without any possible doubt that the pieces were not part of the missing biplane flown by World War I ace Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli.

The debris appeared to be parts of an instrument panel and a gas tank.

Pepsi-Cola President's Estate Found Insolvent

$383,000 of Late Alfred N. Steele's $607,128 Held in Escrow by Company Because of Suit

NEW YORK (AP)— Alfred N. Steele, 57, husband of actress Joan Crawford and president of the stockholder-Pepsi-Cola Co. at his death, left a gross estate of $607,128 but actually was insolvent, an intermediate estate accounting has disclosed.

Surrogate Joseph A. Cox yesterday signed an order allowing Lillian Steele, who preceded Miss Crawford as Steele's wife, to examine the executors of the estate. The executors are Miss Crawford, George C. Textor and J. Lincoln Morris.

Steele died April 19, 1959. Held in Escrow

The intermediate accounting of the executors showed that the principal asset in Steele's estate was $383,000 held in escrow by Pepsi-Cola because of a stockholder's suit. Under a Sept. 22, 1955, agreement Steele was granted stock options which, the stockholder's suit maintained, should be declared null and void as a "gift" wasting corporation assets.

There were these major claims against the estate: A $83,500 tax claim by the federal government; a $21,000 tax claim by the state; $17,000 for administration fees; $21,750 by Lillian Steele, $16,150 by her son Alfred, and $97,534 which Miss Crawford said she loaned to Steele.

No Funds

Said the accounting: "It is apparent that at the present time the executors do not have sufficient disbursements to pay in full the administration expenses and the priority claims. They clearly are unable at the present time to pay any nonpriority claims."

The executors said they had on hand a total of $95,000. The accounting showed that Steele and his former wife, Lillian, were married July 8, 1948, and were divorced March 11, 1953. Under the divorce settlement, Steele agreed to pay $950 a month for support of his son, Alfred Nelson, now 11, until he was 21, and $9,000 a year to Lillian until her death or remarriage. The agreement stipulated that if Steele died before she did, the payments were to be continued by his estate.

Under Steele's will, Miss Crawford was bequeathed the residue of his estate.

Rubin, Baum and Levin, counsel to Lillian Steele, were authorized to begin examination next Wednesday.

WHAT ABOUT OUR SCHOOL CHILDREN?

J. H. Grenshaw, M.D., of St. Louis, Mo., made this statement: "Seventy five per cent of the school children of St. Louis are afflicted with some form of spinal curvature or spinal defect, and this is the cause of many grave and dangerous diseases later in life."

You are responsible for your child's present as well as future health. It is up to you to see that all is done that can be done to insure that. True the child should have periodical examinations of eyes, ears, nose, throat and teeth. However the cause of many of the troubles found in these tissues can be traced to the spine.

To be sure that your child's health program is complete, this year have a chiropractic physical examination made. Spinal defects can easily be corrected during the growing years.

Erickson Hair and Scalp Specialists accept only those whose hair will respond. Individuals accepted are given a written guarantee that they must be satisfied with results or money will be refunded on a pro-rated basis. So, why put off your hair problem any longer?

Before After Mr. T. A. Melton, Jr.

Hopeless Cases Refused

We cannot help men and women who are sick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. In a great majority of cases of baldness (a condition sometimes described as male pattern baldness) we know of no treatments, including the Erickson method, that are of value, therefore Erickson Hair and Scalp Specialists will continue its policy of refusing all hopeless cases. The people pictured here did not have male pattern baldness.

Before After Mr. K. Fryer

For your free hair and scalp examination, go to the Conway Hotel between 12 Noon and 8 P.M. on Mon. Feb. 6th, and ask the room clerk for Mr. T. R. Stonier's room number. You may phone for an appointment or just come in at your convenience. Examinations are given in private. You will not be embarrassed or obligated in any way.

DON'T OVER-BURDEN YOUR WIRING SYSTEM

Better check your "housepower" . . .

There is a definite limit to the number of appliances your outlets (and your wiring system) can handle safely. When you exceed this limit, you're asking for trouble! Better let us check your present set-up against your needs, make recommendations, submit estimates.

Hollywood's Jumping With New TV Business

MGM to Start 9 Serials Next Month, Fox Has 98 Actors Under Contract

BY JINGO

Hollywood is really rocking with television business sprouting in all directions. MGM-TV next month will have cameras cranking on nine new serials.

Fox-TV is turning the tables on the starless studios and now has 98 actors under contract.

The studio's silver screen counterparts also are making movies, but a good slice of the business is still being canned across the oceans.

Even the TV serials are making for the Old World. Alan Jay Lerner, co-author of "Camelot," is moving to Europe to produce an MGM electronic serial starring Larry Blyden. The plot has a vaudeville troupier touring Europe with three American chorines. Didn't MGM do something similar with Gene Kelly for the palaces some time ago?

Leo's aerial corps also has dusted off an old screen serial for TV play, the old "Andy Hardy" hits. Bobby Vee of juke box "fame" will take the Hardy role. Will this be a "Lassie" serial with a hot rod instead of a dog or a horse?

Recent research by Jingo has revealed a tendency in the very young to equate any type of irritation with a need for eating. Could this explain through a process of regression the popularity of TV snacks and dinners?

A survey of county hospitals in the area has discovered that the installation of television has nearly made the use of tranquilizers obsolete in many of their wards.

Vincent Price appears to be making a bid for the title of star of the most horror shows. When he completes shooting Poe's "Pit and the Pendulum" he will co-star opposite Jeanne Crain in "The Nefarious Queen Nefertiti." He also will star in Poe's "The Mask of the Red Death" and "The Cask of Amontillado" on the silver screen after three networks turned down the scripts as being "too scary," which may mean there wasn't enough gunplay and mayhem.

Price views the current scene with this observation, "It's getting so, in order for an actor to be a star in Hollywood, that he has to make horror pictures — and appear on the Jack Paar Show! I don't know which is scarier." Come now, Vincent.

"The Chalk Garden" will be placed on the silver screen by Universal. Sandra Dee gets the pyromaniac part with Greer Garson and Eva Marie Saint appearing in support.

Actress Ann Moser First American 'Lady'
NEW YORK (AP)—Ann Moser is the first American girl assigned to the title role of "My Fair Lady" in that hit musical's five-year White Way run. Miss Moser has taken over the part previously performed by Julie Andrews, Sally Ann Howes and Pamela Charles, all British.

Olympic Decathlon Champion Rafer Johnson, named male athlete of the year for 1960 by the Associated Press, poses on a Hollywood set during the filming of "Pirates of Tortuga." Johnson has a part in the movie. He was picked for the athlete of the year award by the vote of 256 sports writers and editors.

Uncle Miltie Contender for Film Award

BY JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Who aside from his late and beloved mother) would have expected to find television's Uncle Miltie a contender for an Academy Award nomination?

But as ballots go out this week-end for the annual Oscar sweepstakes, Milton Berle, who played himself in "Let's Make Love" is among candidates for the best supporting actor nomination.

It would be refreshing to see Milton win—if for no other reason than that he promises to give the show.

first honest appreciative speech Oscar history.

"If I get the Oscar," he promises, "I will say that I thank no one but myself. I did it all, folks."

The critics put Milton in the Oscar race. Bosley Crowther of the New York Times was ecstatic about Berle playing Berle.

Crowther said Berle stole the show without much effort from Marilyn Monroe and Yves Montand. The Times' writer devoted three-fourths of his review to Milton who only was on screen 11 minutes.

This has been Uncle Miltie's year NBC-TV put him on "Jackpot Bowling" when it had a miserable rating of .08.

"Other comics thought it a comedown for a star comic to go on a sports show. I didn't. Now it's a combination sports-comedy, than that he promises to give the show."

Saturday, February 4, 1961 Appletan Post-Crescent A3

And the rating is a fat .29. Milton's insult comedy stole the Gary Cooper testimonial dinner—and the same thing happened at the inaugural gala.

"I came on 23rd," says Milton. "World War II preceded me on the program."

Milton's irreverence knows no bounds. When President Kennedy showed up at Frank Sinatra's party for the cast of the gala—a good 12 hours or more after the swearing-in, Milton greeted the new President thus:

"And they said your term wouldn't last."

Cancelled Spy Show Now Set For Feb. 15

NEW YORK (AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting System, which canceled the network telecast of "The Spy Next Door," says the show will be broadcast Feb. 15.

The program originally was set to be shown Feb. 1 on the "Armstrong Circle Theater." Last Sunday, without comment, CBS said it was canceling the show, which deals with Soviet spying in the United States.

Thursday CBS announced the new telecast date. The network said the cancellation decision came after a reading of the script last Saturday. However, said CBS, the producer was authorized to record the program.

On Wednesday night, the statement said, the program was screened and approved by five CBS vice presidents.

The network denied that cancellation of the show resulted from governmental pressure, saying: "CBS had no contact with anyone prior to its decision not to broadcast the program as scheduled except for contacts with the producer of the program and the sponsor's advertising agency, both of whom recognized that this decision was properly in the hands of CBS."

Moving of Industry to Make 1,800 Jobless in Muskegon

By NATE POLOWETZKY
MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP)—Men in heavy work clothes, their faces drawn with anxiety, discussed the news. Wives thought of the future, and saw little hope.
In club and cafe, in modest home or luxurious, one theme dominated all talk: The disaster. Everyone knew what that meant. The news that Borg-Warner Corp. is going to transfer its Norge Division, manufacturer of refrigerators and freezers, to Fort Smith, Ark., sometime early this summer.
Last Ditch Effort
That was the scene today in gloomy Muskegon as citizens girded for a last ditch effort—which nearly everyone discounted beforehand—to convince Norge to stay.
Judson Sayre, Borg-Warner president, said the company was moving to Arkansas because of “favorable business climate, expanding South and Southwest markets, anticipated growth in old men and employers don't want old people. Others have never worked anywhere else and don't know anything else but working for Norge.”

Said another: “I have a friend who has been with Norge for 27 or 30 years. He's been a foreman for at least 20 years.”
Was Bricklayer
“He used to be a bricklayer a long time ago and maybe he can do that work again, but I doubt it. Others have worked only in Norge and don't know anything else.”
The Norge decision to move, announced Wednesday, means that some 1,800 jobs will be eliminated in the Muskegon-Muskegon Heights area of northwest Lower Michigan, already plagued by high unemployment. According to latest figures, 6,500 persons are unemployed in the area. This is an 11.6 per cent unemployment rate, and compares to the national figure of 7 per cent. The fall-off in employment has

Birth, Death Rate Higher, Figures Show

Appleton Health Department Lists 1960 Statistics
An increase in nearly every category of records except marriages from 1959 to 1960 was reported by the Appleton Health Department.
Births, deaths, illegitimate births, infant deaths and communicable diseases rose during the year, while marriages in Appleton dropped from 360 to 340, or about 6 per cent.
As in the previous year, births far outnumbered deaths. In 1960, there were 2,336 babies born, of which 1,307 were children of Appleton residents — increases of 5 and 4 per cent, respectively. Thirty-two pairs of twins were born in 1960. There were 461 deaths, including 345 residents — increases of 14 and 11 per cent. A total of 495 burial permits were issued in 1960, a 16 per cent increase over the previous year.

Illegitimate births more than doubled, increasing from 9 to 20 in the year. Eleven unwed mothers were from outside the city.
Fetal deaths totaled 40 in 1960, compared with 37 the year before.
More Infants Die
Infant mortality climbed from 36 deaths of children 1 year old and under, or 16.1 per 1,000 births, in 1959 to 46, or 19.7 per 1,000, in 1960. The infant mortality rate still is lower than the state average of about 21 in 1960.
Eighteen infant deaths were attributed to prematurity, nine to congenital heart defects, five to lack of oxygen, five to Rh blood factors and other erythroblastosis fetalis, one to a car accident and one to fire.
Communicable diseases reported to the health department in 1960 totaled 1,624, compared with 918 the previous year.
For the fourth year in a row, no polio cases were reported. Salk vaccine probably is the reason for this record, the Board of Health said. There also was no rheumatic fever since 1955, according to the report, but officials believe there are cases which have not been reported.
Incidence of most diseases was equal to or below the average for the previous year.

In the 10 years, 1951 to 1960, there were 649 cases of measles, 518 chicken pox, 200 mumps, 31 German measles, 25 scarlet fever, 12 tuberculosis, six whooping cough and three meningitis. No diphtheria, erysipelas, small pox, hepatitis, typhoid fever, undulant fever, polio or rheumatic fever were reported. Schools offer diphtheria, tetanus and small pox immunization to children under 12 years old.
The Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association mobile unit X-rayed 1,768 people in Appleton last year, including 1,559 that showed to be essentially negative, 44 suspicious, tuberculosis and others with other possible abnormalities. There are 68 former tuberculosis patients for whom the city must record follow-up studies.
The sanitation department reported that increasing time is being spent each year in rodent control. Of 246 complaints received last year, about 60 per cent were about rodents.
Mrs. Mildred C. Jensen, public health nurse, made 910 home calls during the year. These include 540 to new mothers and 273 to handicapped people, most of whom were of pre-school age.

Hearts and Flowers Go Together Valentine's Day

To all men we say, never underestimate the power of a flower. More hearts have been captured by flowers than by words alone. Flowers express those three magic words, "I love you," most quickly, eloquently and ardently. Flowers kindle sentimentality in any feminine heart, from Mother

(your first love), to that teen-age daughter whose love you cherish. Flowers say "you are dear to me" on any day, but they are especially meaningful on Valentine's Day. You can see Valentine specials at Riverside Greenhouse, 1236 E. Pacific street. Place your order early for Valentine flowers and remember that Riverside is open every Friday evening until 8:30 p. m. Quick Tips For Better Winter Driving

- Six quick tips from the National Safety council on how to be a better winter driver:
1. Winterize not only your car, but your driving technique and your attitude as well. Normal speeds often are too fast for winter conditions. When weather's bad, slow down.
 2. Have good tires—preferably snow tires—and for more severe conditions use reinforced tire chains.
 3. Keep windshield and windows clear and wiper blades, heater and defroster in proper operating condition.
 4. Get the feel of the road as soon as you start out (but away from hazards or other cars). By cautiously trying your brakes or gently pressing your accelerator, you can learn how slippery the road surface is. Adjust your speed accordingly.
 5. Keep well back of the vehicle ahead to give yourself plenty of room for an emergency stop.
 6. Pump your brakes to stop quickly on icy roads. Jamming on the brakes will throw the car into an uncontrollable skid.
- There's nothing much you can do about winter weather—except be prepared for it, the safety council said.

Television Has Name From Latin
Television works in much the same way as radio. In radio, sound is changed into electromagnetic (invisible light) waves which are sent through the air. In TV, both sound and light are changed into electromagnetic waves.
The name television is well-chosen, for it comes from the Greek word tele, meaning far, and the Latin word videre, meaning to see. Thus television means to see far. Sometimes television is referred to as video, a Latin word which means I see.

Vitamins Needed For One's Health
For many years, the cause of the common Oriental disease called beriberi puzzled scientists. In 1911 Casimir Funk, a Polish biochemist, discovered that a certain substance in rice polishings or bran would cure beriberi. He decided that the reason so many Orientals had beriberi was because they lived largely on polished rice. He named the substance he discovered vitamin from the words, vita, meaning life, and amine, the name of a certain kind of nitrogen compound. Since 1911 it has been proved that the vitamins in food are essential to health and growth.
No one vitamin can take the place of another and the lack of any one vitamin may affect a person's health. The best way to obtain vitamins is to eat the foods in which they naturally occur. There are also artificial preparations which are valuable in curing vitamin lacks. But these should be used only under the direction of a doctor.

Prepare for Stout Fight Against Attempt to Tamper With Home Rule

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Local government officials are preparing for a stout fight against the demands of municipal employe unions for state control of local government labor relations.

The Wisconsin Council of County and Employe unions, which has had some success in recent legislatures, has written an ambitious legislative platform calling for a state minimum wage and maximum hours act applying to municipal employment, as well as a system of state arbitration and mediation of disputes between unions and employes and counties, cities, towns, villages or other local government employing units.

Such proposals strike at the heart of the home rule principle, protests the League of Wisconsin Municipalities. "The unions apparently want the legislature to run every city, village and town hall, county courthouse and school room from Madison," grumbles Ed Johnson of the League in a current bulletin to localities.

The ancient and always bitter argument about the legitimacy of beer taverns that sell to 18 year olds and others under the age of 21—the minimum age for the purchase of hard liquors—promises to be revived in the new legislative session.

One of the first petitions to be recorded in the current session contained nearly 3,000 names of Sheboygan residents, headed by A. Matt Werner, the editor of the Sheboygan Press and a regent of the University of Wisconsin. It asks for the closing of the "so-called teen-age bars or taking whatever other action is feasible to reduce highway accidents and delinquency resulting from frequenting of bars by minors."

By arranging for public hearings on legislation a full two weeks ahead of the usual calendar, the Republican legislative leaders may have done something to boast about in the next political campaign.

But the benefits are not as great as might have been supposed. Several committee chairmen have already been forced to schedule new and later hearings on bills scheduled early, because witnesses complained that they didn't have enough notice to permit proper study or preparation.

The state bureau of engineering isn't taking any chances on the possibility of a revision of state tax policy that may incorporate a sales tax into the Wisconsin fiscal scheme for the first time.

Its new construction contracts provide a clause assuring contractors that if a sales tax is enacted during the life of the agreement, and such a tax is applied to the materials and services involved in state work, the contract price will be automatically adjusted accordingly.

At 75, veteran Assemblyman Hugh Harper of Grant County is considerably older than most of his seat-mates in the state legislature.

But the elderly politician from the southwestern corner of the state is one of the most resolute campaigners for a liberalization of the traditional voting qualifications of the state.

He wants persons 18 years of age and over to be permitted to vote.

His proposal before the legislature is one of a series he has offered over the years. But there is no sign thus far that the lawmakers will respond any more favorably than they did in other sessions. The 21-year rule has prevailed since the establishment of the state.

Some seniority is usually required for the acquisition of rank in the legislature, although the rules are not as rigid in the Wisconsin statehouse as in other states and in the U. S. congress.

Because of the fluidity of legislative politics in the eastern Wisconsin counties in recent years, relatively few men of power and rank have served from that section in several recent legislatures. The only commanding figure, in terms of position, from the western zone of the state in the current session is W. J. Huitnik, the five term representative of Rusk, Sawyer and Washburn Counties, who is chairman of the principal committees of the lower house and deputy speaker there.

Legislative politicians find it difficult to abandon the legislative life. Last year old-time politician W. W. Clark of Wood County, state senator for many years who could have won another term in his district, decided to retire. His family wished it, he explained to his colleagues and to Republican state headquarters. Moreover, he was weary, the elderly legislator confided.

But now Clark in "retirement" is back in political harness in the legislative session, as the lobbyist and director of the Wisconsin Mobile Homes Association. The group represents the manufacturers of house trailers, who are usually attentive to legislative developments affecting their regulated business.

Republicans and Democrats are doing some serious thinking about the traditional Wisconsin scheduled election dates, and especially the relation of the primary elections to the final election in the fall of the election year.

The time between mid-September, the date of the primary, and early November, when the general elections are held, is extremely short for the party manager who doesn't know who his candidate is until the primary is held. That Nash was one of the most prominent of the boosters of the presidential candidacy of Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota when John F. Kennedy was involved in the struggle for Wisconsin nomination convention delegates just a year ago.

The departure of Ivan Nestingen, the Madison mayor, for the position of under-secretary of the U. S. department of health, education and welfare, evidently removes him from the field of prospective Democratic state office candidates in the immediate future.

Nestingen had become restless in the mayor's office, realized that he could not continue in it as a career. But there were no plausible opportunities for partisan politics immediately in sight for the man who had turned down a bid to run for congressman in the second district in 1958.

The Wisconsin State Employment Service in its annual report to the governor and the legislature flatly asserts what many persons have observed casually, that the teaching profession "can no longer be classified collectively as a poorly paid occupation."

Many qualified graduates entering the field are now receiving first job pay of $4,200 to $4,500, and especially women, for a nine month contract, the report observably with that provided in industry and other professional fields, it added.

George Watson, retiring state superintendent of public instruction who serves as a regent of both the University of Wisconsin and the state college system, has publicly decried the suggestions that the high enrollment crisis in higher education must be counteracted with more rigorous performance standards for applicants and admitted students.

Ruthlessness in qualifying students won't help, he says.

"Merely dropping students will not solve the problem. Now is the time for great teaching, for individual concern, for personal guidance and counselling. No institution ever achieved fame by its drop-out record," he writes in a bulletin of his department appealing for "thoughtful" consideration of the enrollment challenges faced by state colleges and universities.

Rahr's Combines Beer and Sports In New Ad Drive

Recognizing the sports consciousness of Northeastern Wisconsin, Rahr's Beer is using a sports theme in its 1961 advertising program.

Fred W. Miller, president of Rahr-Green Bay Brewing Corp., said today that promotional expenditures are being sharply increased over last year. The program began Feb. 1 in all advertising media. Creative Group, Appleton, is Rahr's agency.

A colorfully illustrated booklet, Rahr's "Great Record of Sports," is being offered through weekly half page, two color newspaper ads in the Appleton Post-Crescent. This is the first color program conducted by a brewery in this area, Miller announced. Revised editions of "Great Records of Sports" will be issued periodically.

Rahr's has also developed a new product theme, "Air sealed out, flavor sealed in" which will be promoted along with the sports tie-in.

The twin themes will be carried out at point-of-purchase, Miller explained. Window streamers, counter displays and quantities of the "Great Record of Sports" booklets are now being distributed to beer depots, taverns and grocery stores in all Northeastern Wisconsin countries, Rahr's primary marketing area.

Selling Building Supplies In The Winter

In the lumber and building supply business, particularly in the midwest, northeast and northwest as well as Canada, sales slumps come in the wintertime. Building Supply News suggests that dealers borrow selling techniques used by other retailers: (1) Use seasonal promotions that offer a finishing (turn them into recreation rooms by selling paneling, floor tile, ceiling tile, trim and shelving); attic insulation (advertise how much owners will save on heating bills); kitchen remodeling (build sales by offering special price, faster service.)

No more winter heating problems, says John Jenkel, of Jenkel Oil company, distributors of Skelly products. Skelly furnace oil with SK-12 additive ends four main causes of furnace failure.

It keeps the nozzles clean. A pinpoint particle of dirt can clog a nozzle. SK-12 does away with sludge, carbon and foreign residue that clog nozzles and vital furnace parts.

It keeps filters gum-free. Filters do their duty longer, better with new SK-12, guarding the system. It prevents dirty gummed-up filters and keeps oil free from impurities.

It keeps fuel lines open. SK-12 prevents rust and corrosion that could easily cause a major repair bill. It works from fuel tank to nozzle.

It gets faster starts. Skelly Furnace oil, with the highest BTU output known, burns completely. With SK-12 for a clean, unclogged system, this means quick starts and faster, fuller flame.

Jenkel Oil company, distributors of Skelly Furnace oil, will deliver promptly and with convenient metered service, a printed receipt from the meter on the truck to show accurate delivery of the customer's purchase. Jenkel will service your home or place of business with oil on demand or at regular intervals, whichever you prefer. Call Jenkel at RE 9-1144.

On the average, American couples spend $600 on each child during the first year of its life, reports Barron's. Purchases of goods for children ranging up to 10 years of age amount to about $8 billion annually. Baby food processors and drug companies turn out $1.2 billion worth of infant formulas, junior foods, cough syrups, vitamins, vaccines and medicated powders. Shoe manufacturer sales of children's footwear now represent over 10 percent of total shoe volume, or $400 million a year. The entertainment and educational field chalks up volume of another $2.5 billion. And sales of juvenile books, toys, and revenues from cartoon movies and amusement parks, should hit $3 billion by 1970. Largest of all is the market for juvenile clothing.

Wisconsin's Constitution

The Wisconsin constitution provides that an amendment be passed by a bare majority of the legislature, but that the amendment face two successive legislatures and then go to the people in a referendum. The process takes at least two years.

There currently is an amendment, supported by Gov. Nelson, before the lawmakers which would shorten the time by requiring any amendment pass each house of the legislature by a two-thirds vote and be submitted to a referendum vote at the next following general election.

Those proposing the change apparently are satisfied that the people of Wisconsin give very little attention to such amendments during the two years between legislative sessions. Whether this is true or not can be decided by the people on the basis of their knowledge of constitutional amendments now pending.

One constitutional amendment, adopted in 1959 and now up for consideration again, would give cities and villages greater power to condemn private land for public use. Another would authorize the legislature to provide for succession to public offices in case of an enemy attack. The third would permit salary increases for public officers elected for four years or more during their term of service.

Voters who think that the 2-year waiting period enables them to learn something about the constitutional amendments proposed may now ask themselves whether they have learned anything about the proposals mentioned here during this waiting period. It is doubtful whether many people learned much about these subjects. Probably very few people even remember that such proposals are pending. Therefore they may be inclined to support the short cut for amending the constitution but there are others who will point out that the waiting period is more for the information of members of the legislature than for the people.

Undoubtedly many legislators have made inquiries about the proposals and their possible effect during the waiting period. In fact many resolutions to amend the constitution have failed of passage on their presentation to the legislature the second time. That may mean there is some benefit in the waiting period. It also may mean that legislators, knowing they will have a second chance to vote on such a proposed amendment, are inclined to put almost any proposal on the waiting period knowing that it can be defeated the second time around.

The question the people will have to decide when the proposed short cut to constitutional amendment comes up is whether the requirement of a two-thirds vote at one legislative session will provide the same safeguard as the 2-year waiting period with simple majority votes at succeeding sessions of the legislature.

Press Conferences—Live or Dead

In spite of the fact President Kennedy handled two live broadcasts of a press conference without even a ripple of trouble, there still are a great many people who feel he is engaging in a dangerous publicity stunt and should discontinue it. Even among those papers and commentators who agree that the first broadcasts were a great success and that President Kennedy showed great skill of presentation there is nevertheless a strong tone of caution in their approval. On the other hand there are many definitely opposed to this process.

Among them is David Lawrence, a veteran newspaper columnist, who has had many years of experience in presenting Washington news. Mr. Lawrence says, "If the President of the United States has something important to say to the world, there is no reason why he shouldn't take time to formulate a carefully worded statement which has been previously submitted to his Secretary of State and his other advisers, including perhaps key members of Congress. But in a press conference, a president is questioned and must answer on the spot. Time and again the words instantly transmitted abroad have caused embarrassment. Other governments, especially our Allies, wonder sometimes why they were not, as a matter of courtesy, told ahead of time about such pronouncements, so that they could offer their own suggestions and perhaps modifications. For America cannot play the game alone—it is dependent on the good will of the Western Allies."

There can be no doubt of the wisdom and good sound common sense embodied in that statement. No doubt President Kennedy will carefully formulate statements when he has something of world concern to announce, but it should be remembered that for the most part the presidential news conferences relate to matters which are something less than of world importance. Much of the time is given to domestic issues of prime interest to the people of the United States. Carefully formulated statements are certainly appropriate for many matters just as off the cuff answers may be appropriate for other types of news. A live broadcast tends to excite interest in the President and in the business of government. When that interest is built up it is a certainty that more people will read about government and thus more will be enticed into reading some of the prime world news which properly will be conveyed in carefully prepared statements.

The best part of the live broadcast is that it generates interest among voters in all walks of life. Few persons who ever occupied the White House are better qualified than President Kennedy to build such an interest through their own personality. But while freely acknowledging the benefit of such news presentations it should be remembered that the greatest danger will come after the new administration has been in office for a time and after some of its proposals have come under severe opposition fire. It is then that questions become sharper and tempers may flare. It is then also that President Kennedy may find that tapes prepared in advance and carefully edited may be just as interesting to the public and of greater value to the government than the live broadcasts.

Compulsory Retirement at 65

Retirement at age 65 can be a wonderful experience under certain conditions. The most important is that the retired person find something interesting and useful to occupy his leisure time. The old theory that the retired person finds happiness in merely sitting in the sun or fishing has been exploded.

Dr. Louis Orr of Orlando, Fla., a former president of the American Medical Association, recently pointed out there is no good reason for selecting 65 as "the magic number separating the productive from the unproductive, the healthy from the unhealthy." He suggested further that the retirement of persons who are mentally able to do useful work can be dangerous. In fact, he said, this policy has "undoubtedly contributed to the steadily increasing number of persons 65 and over in mental hospitals. In Japan, a nation which traditionally assigns positive assets and values to aging, mental illness actually decreases with age."

For these reasons, and perhaps others, the compulsory retirement of employees at 65 is on the decline, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The Journal believes that more people today favor a liberal retirement policy. This, it is said, is because more people are in good health today at 65 than they were a generation ago, and thus can very well use their experience and skill to the benefit of their employers as well as to themselves. AMA committee on aging now is urging labor and industry to "reevaluate their support of arbitrary retirement systems," and a sizable number of firms have liberalized their retirement programs recently, the committee says. It is something everyone should ponder.

Inauguration Ball Still Planned

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for the week of Feb. 2, 1961.

Preparations are progressing for a grand Union Inauguration Ball to come off on the 4th of March. It is designed to be in no way a partisan affair, but one in which all Union men of all sections and parties may join.

Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott will head the list of managers, assisted by the veteran Commodore Stewart, Gen. Wool and other prominent officers of the Army and Navy. Crittenden, Seward, Douglas and others are expected, with distinguished citizens from each State, to participate in the management of the affair.

A spacious building will be erected especially for the purpose of the ball, upon Judiciary Square adjoining City Hall. It is designed to place tickets at $5 each. For the greater convenience of the public, they will be placed on sale in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans and various other large cities of the Union from which representatives probably will be present.

No effort will be spared to make the occasion a brilliant success in all respects.

The house inflationary bloc adopted a resolution for payment of the soldier's bonus in new currency. The resolution opposed any new taxes as "entirely unnecessary."

Retiring after 23 years of public life, mayor John Goodland announced that he would not be a candidate for reelection that spring.

Mrs. John Conway was re-elected president and treasurer and C. H. Ender vice-president of the John Conway Hotel Company. Thomas Flanagan was elected secretary.

The United Mine Workers formally endorsed President Roose-

Mrs. W. R. Challoner was hostess to members of the Monday Club.

Allied forces were reported less than 7 miles from bomb-wrecked, fire-blackened Seoul. Earl D. Johnson, United States Assistant Secretary of the Army, said he visited troops within that distance southwest of the former South Korean capital.

Federal court action and urging from the White House brought no indication of an early back-to-work move by "sick" striking railroad switchmen.

William Lemard, Appleton, was appointed managing editor of the Round Table, the student newspaper at Beloit College.

Erwin W. Sailerlich, president of the Appleton Memorial Hospital Association, explained the project to the Appleton Lions Club.

BY DICKSON HARTWELL

Before Pearl Harbor, Gen. George C. Marshall described as our main contribution to modern war a new, small, bouncy vehicle with the official designation of truck, quarter-ton, four-by-four, but better known to practically everyone, then and now, as the jeep.

No one is certain exactly where "jeep" came from. The most widely accepted theory is that it originated in the pronunciation of G.P., meaning "general purpose."

At any rate, this diminutive, versatile and extremely practical machine became one of

An enduring institution of World War II was the jeep—as much of a symbol in its way as was the mule in World War I. Now for the first time its saga sung, by a one time air force lieutenant who saw the jeep in action in the Pacific.

the memorable symbols of American participation in World War II. It was a kind of military Model T, combining the best elements of Yankee tinkering and functional design.

The jeep was a no-nonsense solution to a specific wartime problem. Its low silhouette was meant to make it usable in the front line area. Its four-wheel drive enabled it to negotiate soft ground and climb grades that would have defeated an ordinary car. It could operate without strain from three to 60 m.p.h. and was virtually indestructible. Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of engineers, a notoriously conservative branch of the army, once said he had "never seen a jeep that wouldn't run."

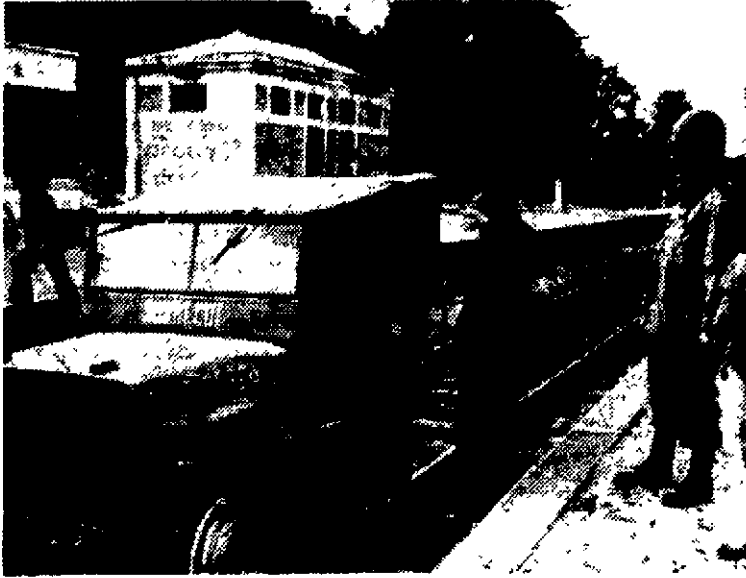

Quickly Proved Itself

In its first large-scale maneuvers in Louisiana in September, 1941, the jeep completely stole the show, pulling antitank guns into position where "enemy" tanks had not expected to find them. In the North African landings—the first major combat operation for the jeep—it proved itself time and again.

Perhaps the most dramatic jeep offensive action of the war was an attack on enemy aircraft led by David Stirling, the "phantom major," commander of a British raiding force organized around the jeep as basic transportation. The target was Landing Ground 12 at Sidi Haneish, 70 miles west of El Alamein.

Each jeep was armed with four Vickers K machine guns capable of firing 1,000 rounds a minute. Formed in flying wedge, the jeep charged out of the desert onto the airfield between the rows of parked planes, all guns blazing. Then they roared away into the comparative safety of the desert. The score: 25 planes destroyed and a dozen damaged. The attacking force: 75 men and 18 jeeps.

As the war progressed, the jeep's versatility seemed endless. With stretchers, it became a front line ambulance. A jeep plus a radio was a mobile command post. Jeeps pulled planes to dispersal bunkers. Soldiers raced them uphill, as in a famous cartoon by Bill Mauldin, to get hot radiator water for shaving. In the Philippines a jeep with flanged wheels pulled

The Jeep Combined the Best elements of Yankee tinkering and functional design. Not many obstacles could halt its advance. Bouncing through the air or slushing through mud, the jeep proved virtually an ignition switch in place of a key, so you either had to chain it or remove the distributor head.

No Roads Needed

One of the permanent items of wartime mythology is the odyssey of two reporters, Daniel DeLuca and Darrell Berrigan, who drove their jeeps 1,300 miles out of Burma into India after the Japanese capture of Mandalay. On their arrival in Imphal, it was pointed out there must be some mistake, since there were no roads in the area they had crossed.

"Sh-h! Not so loud," the Chicago Daily News quoted one of them as saying. "Our jeep hasn't found out about roads yet and we don't want to spoil it."

It isn't surprising that the jeep attained a unique place in the affection and confidence of the men who used it. There is the story of a corporal found sitting in the charred wreckage of a shelled jeep, who wouldn't be comforted by assurances he would get a replacement. Between sobs he said "but I loved this one."

The jeep was a vehicle for the young. At least you had to be limber and resilient to get in and out, or to survive many miles of jeep-borne travel. (The contortions required to climb into a jeep, for tight-skirted WACs and WAVEs, were a source of never-failing interest to admiring GIs.)

There were only two ways to sit in a jeep, either bolt upright or slouched down to the middle of the backbone, and neither was particularly comfortable.

Couldn't Lock It

But jeeps were treated as treasured possessions. You couldn't lock one, since it had indestructible. It could ford streams or even ride along railroad tracks. This extreme adaptability made the jeep a valuable piece of equipment during World War II.

ance and performance. Prodded, the quartermaster corps invited Willys to develop a model at its own expense.

The army drivers at Camp Holabird expected to make short work of the Willys model, but they were considerably surprised. The Willys' test set even higher standards of performance than Bantams. There was only one flaw: the Willys jeep weighed 2,423 pounds. Specifications for new bids raised the maximum, including oil and water, to 2,175 pounds, but Willys was told to get under that limit or forego orders, and Ford too was asked to participate.

Barney Roos now had to decide whether to scrap his tough engine and buy a lighter and less powerful one on the open market as Bantam had done. He decided not to, and began the ordeal of reducing weight.

First all unnecessarily long bolts in body and chassis were shortened. Then the thickness of steel in body and fenders was reduced. Tough alloys were substituted in the fram for heavier carbon steel. Reinforcing plates were reduced. Ten pounds of paint were eliminated. Once by ounce the weight came down. The slenderized model weighed 2,164 pounds. Willys was in.

After the first vehicles from Ford, Bantam and Willys were tested, the Infantry Board reported:

"Willys performance was superior to that of Bantam and Ford in acceleration, maximum speed, grade climbing and cross country. The standard vehicle should be based upon the Willys chassis, with the Ford shift lever and hand brake arrangement, and the power and performance characteristics of the Willys."

Turn Out 651,068

Bantam soon dropped out of the running and Ford and Willys settled down to the job of turning out 651,068 jeeps for the war effort.

The wartime performance of the jeep naturally stimulated interest in its potential postwar uses. Before the fighting was over the Department of Agriculture had already begun publicizing alluring jeep solutions to farm labor problems. As a result, civilian desire to own a jeep was widespread by the time the first combat-weary vehicles were put on the market in November, 1943.

These original jeeps have gone on performing. From time to time, for instance, the Egyptian army has dug up a jeep from the desert sands after ten years or more and quickly put it in combat condition.

The day of the jeep is still not over. It is faster and more powerful than ever. About 100,000 a year are produced in the U. S. alone. During the International Geophysical Year jeeps operated successfully in Antarctica, the only wheeled vehicles in the Navy's expedition. In Mexico on several haciendas where animals are bred for the bull ring, durable jeeps are used instead of perishable horses to test the fighting qualities of young bulls.

But the jeep's military outlook is not bright. U. S. Army orders have trickled away to nothing. For some years the army had been after Ford to develop an improved quarter-ton four-by-four and in June, 1959, production orders were finally issued. The new vehicle has already been nicknamed the Mutt—which stands for Military Utility Tactical Truck.

It is undoubtedly more capable, more comfortable and more admirable in many respects, but it isn't the jeep—and those of us who loved the venerable vehicle will not be fooled, or comforted.

Nelson's Tax Finding Isn't Anything New

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — It is demonstrably true, as Gov. Nelson is now anxiously saying at every opportunity, that the crux of the state government's financial embarrassment is the size of the state revenue budget that is sliced for the benefit of the local units of government of Wisconsin.

Save for the demands of the localities for help in paying for their schools, their relief services and many other costly obligations, the state would be able to coast along without taxing difficulties today.

In fact, said the governor in an elaborate if elementary prepared release handed to statehouse news desks the other day, the state could get rid of some of its major taxes—such as the income tax—if the state treasury was responsible only for the financing of the direct state services.

What the governor didn't say, however, is that there is nothing new about all this. Gov. Kohler and Gov. Thomson and Gov. Rennebohm and the others of his immediate predecessors in the executive department doubtless realized also the weight of the local government subsidies in their budget problems.

Indeed, some capitol bystanders with average memory capacity recall that when Gov. Thomson only a couple of years ago tried to use the state aid budget as a crutch for his similar political problems there was a loud and incredulous round of laughter from the liberal grandstands.

Gov. Nelson is troubled because he fears the political results of the tax and deficit publicity which is the continuing news theme from the state capitol this winter. He is trying desperately to put across the idea that the hugely increased state budget, and the deficit and new tax programs that result from it, is not the result of any profligacy of his or the Democrats in the last term at the capitol.

It is the result of the fact that the state has commitments for participating in costly local services and that those local services, and notably the schools, are literally exploding in their costs.

Standing alone that is quite true. But there is an implication in this line of argument that there is something inflexible about these state commitments. That would be misleading. The state set its own standards, as in the schools and relief aid formulas. To some extent the state standards were intended to increase local spending—as in the school program. What the state has done it can undo.

A fair analysis of the state's financial dilemma in relation to local government costs also must recognize that the state has repeatedly imposed new spending requirements on the localities without their leave and sometimes against their protests.

The rallying cry of the League of Municipalities over the years has been the incurable tendency of the state government, under regimes of all political colors, to force new programs upon its constituent local governments.

To distinguish between what are "state" costs and what are "local" costs in the state budget may be politically convenient and even politically necessary, as in Gov. Nelson's present position.

But it has no other importance. State and local government have become so inextricably interwoven during the last couple of decades that only the academic critic can be concerned about such matters. Surely the taxpayer in the ranks doesn't much care. He is concerned about the total take from his purse.

Gov. Nelson appears annoyed that these distinctions are not more widely understood. He might pause to remember how much—or how little—he knew about them before he became governor.

Deer Management Program in State Appears Doomed

Party Permits All but Dead; New Variable Quota Plan in Trouble

Y JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MADISON — The Conservation Department's deer management program is doomed.

The legislature is preparing for swift and nearly unanimous approval of bills to repeal the controversial and now almost notorious party permit system under which the Conservation Commission has attempted to thin out the deer herd lately and has cut down deeply what it calls the deer surplus.

A hearing here this week before the two conservation committees of the legislature provided the documentation for what the legislators had concluded on the basis of their own neighborhood impressions:

Angry Opposition
Rank and file sportsmen's opinion is heavily and angrily opposed to a continuation of the system that permits heavy annual harvests, including the killing of some does and fawns.

The hearing also hinted broadly that the Conservation Department's compromise alternative to the party permit system — which calls a "variable quota" plan — will have most difficult sledding in the legislature. Upper Wisconsin members are predicting flatly that the department bill will be killed, perhaps with majorities as heavy as those predicted for the repeal of the existing party permit law.

Sponsors of the repeal bills say they will have them through both houses and on the desk of Gov. Nelson within a fortnight.

Governor's Stand
The governor has not publicly discussed the deer management controversy, but he is known to be friendly to the conservation department's view that scientific management of harvests is needed for the benefit of the herd and for the protection of the state's huge forest land acreage.

How he will react when he sees the probably overwhelming roll calls, however, can only be guessed. The governor is aware through his own mail that the issue is a hot one among hunters. He is also aware that the legislature can override a veto by a two-thirds vote, and like most governors, he tries to avoid such conflicts with the lawmakers whenever possible. The legislative hearings on the deer question this week illustrated again the immense popular concern about fish and game questions and their relation to legislative politics.

Witnesses who had never before appeared in legislative chambers traveled hundreds of miles from their northern Wisconsin homes to the capitol to tell the lawmakers their worries about dusty in Wisconsin. Only air that they called the destruction of the deer herd, and the dangerous effects of deer herd depletion upon the summer tourist-in-

Youth Camp in State Park All But Assured

Commission Okays Designs for Dining Room, Assembly Hall

The long-delayed youth camp for the Wyalusing State Park in southwestern Wisconsin is now virtually assured.

The Conservation Commission has approved the designs for the construction of a large assembly hall and dining room and two dormitories within the park at the confluence of the Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers in Grant County.

The plans must also be approved by the Building Commission before a construction contract is let, but such endorsement is expected to be routine.

The Conservation Department has been under heavy pressure for years to provide the facilities within the popular camp, but it has delayed action because of financing difficulties.

Roman Koenigs, head of the state parks system, said the approved structures will cost about $54,000.

Future plans for the camp include the provision of additional small dormitories, a cabin for a youth counselor, and a sewage disposal system and related improvements, but they will be withheld pending the legislature's decision on expanding the park financing system.

The lawmakers are considering the adoption of a park user fee system to augment the parks' operation budget and to finance the capital improvements the conservation department admits are needed but cannot now be provided.

Test New Method Of Conservation Teaching in State

Attempt to Integrate Concept Into General Study Curriculum

A new technique in the teaching of natural resources conservation in the public schools is being given a trial in six pilot schools with the encouragement of the Natural Resources Committee of State Agencies.

The experiment is described in the annual report of the state coordinating group filed with the governor and the state legislature.

The purpose is to demonstrate the possibility of integrating the "conservation" concept in the general curriculum. The project is being tried under the direction of a NRCS sub-committee in the schools of Merrill, Wausau, Wauson, Manitowoc, Medford and Elkhorn.

State law requires the teaching

See Need for Some Control of Motors

Property Tax Problem for Fish, Game Unit

Increasing Pressure For Assessment of State-Owned Lands

Like many another land-owner, the Conservation Department is beginning to worry about the property tax assessor.

There is increasing pressure for the assessment of state-owned hunting and fishing lands for local governmental tax purposes and especially local schools. The department doesn't object to the idea of tax liability, its spokesmen have informed the legislature, but it hasn't quite figured out how it should best be handled.

Several years ago the law-makers decided that the state department of taxation should handle the assessments of Conservation Department land parcels for local tax purposes. But the state agency complains that it is not equipped for such work in the field. The department is objecting to current bills that would make it subject to local town assessors, because it has so many separate holdings in so many localities that it would be unable to keep ject matter teaching, so as to avoid the incorporation of a separate course in the school curricula that are already crowded.

Thus the mathematics teacher poses problems of figuring the yield in cords or board feet of the timber grown on an illustrative tract of land; the English teacher may require compositions on conservation problems and topics; and the history teacher might emphasize the rise and fall of civilizations as they relate to the wise or unwise use of natural resources in historical times.

State's Resort Owners Would Like To See Outboards Prohibited on Certain Lakes and Waterways

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The prohibition of powered craft on some of the lakes of the state would be welcomed by the commercial resort proprietors of Wisconsin, according to one of their spokesmen.

track of the local assessors' decisions in time to make appeals where necessary.

Current Proposal
A current proposal of the agency, now being considered by legislative committees, would make such state lands liable to a set rate of taxation, established by state law, based upon the original purchase price paid by the state for the properties devoted to public hunting and fishing and other recreational grounds.

The department has been sensitive to the local tax problem since its big land buying program started more than ten years ago, recognizing that if there is any considerable resistance from local governments about the loss of tax revenue the entire acquisition program might be endangered.

It has carefully solicited the approval of town and county boards for most of its major acquisition proposals.

Violators Note: Wardens Ready

Fish, game, boating and other conservation law violators take note:

The Conservation Department has acquired enough portable two-way radios to equip each of its field wardens.

The effect will be to make the enforcement agents more efficient than ever before in the patrolling of their districts and in the apprehension of violators. The wardens will be able to communicate with airplane patrols, as well as with their district stations and with other ground officers.

State Buys Orchard For Forest Tree Seed

EAGLE RIVER — A Conservation Department seed orchard for the production of forest tree seed for the state reforestation program will be established on a 112-acre plot of forest land in Vilas County.

The agency has bought the tract from the state commissioners of public lands.

BOTH BARRELS
by Jay Reed

Both Barrels is indebted to Mrs. Peter Melchior, 920 E. Lindbergh St., for information on how members of the Winnegamie Dog Club fared during last weekend's Wisconsin Kennel Club dog show at Milwaukee.

The club did very well.

Mrs. William Pryor, Neenah, took first place in the bred-by-exhibitor class with her black Cocker Spaniel. A Bedlington Terrier shown by Mrs. Gordon Braun, Appleton, was first in the puppy class for her breed. Miss Carole Warner, Oshkosh, won a fourth place ribbon with her Collie in the senior puppy class and a Vizsla, or Hungarian pointer, owned by Harvey Dastfenbach, Oshkosh, placed second in the miscellaneous dog class.

Other club members showing dogs were Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Winter, Oshkosh, with their Afghan hound, Champion Crown Crest Mr. Vanward, Mr. and Mrs. Melchior, with their Great Dane, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dashner, Neenah, with their German Shepherd.

Mrs. Melchior tells me 38 dogs and their owners are registered for the new series of classes conducted by the Winnegamie Club. Obedience training classes for Oshkosh dogs will meet Monday evenings at the Athearn Hotel.

For the Fox Cities area, classes in both obedience and show ring handling will meet at Waverly Beach, Menasha, on Tuesday evenings. Registrations are still open for all three classes. Willis Johnson is obedience chairman.

"Why Show Your Dog?" was the question discussed at the club's monthly meeting Thursday. Panel members were Paul Becker and Mrs. Mike Schultz, both of Neenah. Mrs. Gerald Meyer, Appleton, and Carole Warner. Mrs. Pryor was the moderator. Peter Melchior gave a report on plans for the club's first license show April 29.

The Brunette, as I have noted in this space before, is a dog lover from the first toot of training whistle. For this reason it was especially enjoyable to cover the Wisconsin Kennel Club show. We talked and compared notes with dog handlers and owners from several states.

Later, during a lull in the show, we adjourned to a German eatery where we had black beer and schweinchen which, if you are to be me and don't dig the kugel, is roasted pork shank with sauerkraut.

What a way to make a living!

Ted Bernhardt, left, and Larry Below, both of Appleton, display a 15-pound lake trout they took while fishing in 130 feet of water in Wisconsin's Big Green Lake.

Imitation Binoculars Fun

For Children; Easy to Make

BY CAPPY DICK

A pair of imitation binoculars made of mailing tubes can change the appearance of all the scenery when you look through them. The reason is that colored cellophane is used for the lenses. The binoculars can be made in 10 or 15 minutes, once you have assembled the materials. Find a cardboard mailing tube, or use the tube that comes inside a roll of paper towels or waxed paper. Cut it into two pieces, each about four inches long. Do this with the point of a pocket knife or, if the tube is very thick, use a jigsaw. If using a pocketknife, stick the point into the cardboard and slowly work the blade around the circumference until the tube is in two sections. Find some colored cellophane.

You will need two small pieces. They may be of the same color, or two different colors, such as green and red. Spread a piece over the end of one tube and fasten it as smoothly as possible with a rubber band or by tying a heavy thread around the tube (Figure 2). Fasten the second piece over the end of the other tube. The next step is to fasten the tubes together so they resemble a pair of field glasses. This is done as in Figure 1 by gluing a wide band of gummed tape around them. Be sure the ends of the tubes are lined up evenly. Your imitation binoculars are now ready for use. Hold them up to your eyes as the boy is doing in Figure 3 and look at the scenery. You will discover that no matter how gray the day is, it will seem brighter and more colorful. Close one eye and look through only one tube. Then close the other eye and look through the second tube. If you have used two colors of cellophane you will see a great change in the color of the scenery.

Mother-in Law Hits Crisis After Helping

BY THOMAS COLLINS

Women, being women, will do nothing but stir their emotions if they read what follows here.

But men, both the young ones and the old ones, can profit from it. And it is for them that this particular column is written.

A woman, apparently well-born and intelligent, has come upon an emotional crisis in the Golden Years of her life, and has spelled out to me the details of it. Her story:

Collins

"I am a widow. I own my home. I have sufficient income for my needs. What I tell you here is not an episode or a passing problem, but a five-year journey into grief.

Sheltered Child

"My son, who was an only child, married just a few months after my husband died. He married a girl who had not finished her education and had been petted all her life by her mother.

"Because I had money I stepped in to help them after their marriage. I helped them buy a home. I bought most of their furniture.

"I wanted to be accepted by my daughter-in-law, and to a limited extent I was.

"As time moved on I offered what help I could.

"When they had company for dinner I would cook for them. At times I would cook the dinner at my home and bring it to their home. I was never invited to stay for dinner.

Bought for Baby

"After about two years they had a baby. From the start I bought everything for the baby, starting with its bed. Then, when my son and his wife wanted to go out, night or day, they would call me to baby-sit. I would always go. In a period of one month I baby-sat for my grandchild a total of 23 times, which included three or four times a week when my daughter-in-law wanted to play bridge.

"Sometimes I would keep the baby six or eight hours in one day. Once I kept him for two weeks while my son and his wife took a vacation.

"They had no baby-sitter except me.

Put Out of Life

"The baby is now three years old, and till now I have bought all his clothes. I have also let my daughter-in-law use my car two or three times each week for her bridge games and given my son more than $7,000, which is practically all of my savings.

"So what happens? Three months ago my daughter-in-law informed me that she had decided she no longer wanted me in their lives. She said then — and has insisted since — that she doesn't want me to visit her home. She has asked me not even to phone.

"I haven't visited. I haven't phoned. I haven't been able to see the grandson I baby-sat for for three years. I have badly seen my son — even when his wife had a birthday party for him I wasn't invited.

No Backbone?

"At this point things have reached a stage where my daughter-in-law threatens to leave my son, taking the baby with her, if I do not stay out of their lives; and her own mother, who spoiled her to start with, is strongly supporting her in this."

"Is this a spoiled mother with an only son who can't let a younger woman have him?"

"Is it a case of a son with no backbone?"

"Is it a spoiled daughter-in-law who got all she could get and then slammed the door?"

Spoiled Widows

"Or is it a case of two older widows, each spoiled by the luxury of having had a husband, and both grasping for their children to lean on when their husbands passed away, battling each other for the same crutch?"

Even Solomon wouldn't know. But since it is men who spoil women, both the young ones and the old ones, it behooves them to study the unhappiness of this widow and take steps to see that the same sort of private tragedy doesn't happen to them or theirs.

The Ailing House Plans for Remodeling Basement

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

TOILET LOCATION IN BASEMENT

Question: Where could I get information on where to put a toilet in the basement? Also where to get plans for a family room in the basement?

Answer: The toilet should be located as near the present water supply and waste lines as possible, so that a minimum of new piping is required. I suggest sending for a copy of "What You Should Know About Plumbing," available Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago 11, Ill. Building supplies and lumber dealers frequently have manufacturers' suggestion sheets available for finishing basements; these sometimes include bathroom installations. Or the following booklets, at 75 cents each, give plans, including extra bathrooms, for basement family rooms; "How to Remodel Basements and Attics," by Popular Mechanics Press, 200 E. Ontario St., Chicago 11, Ill.; "How to Finish Attics and Basements," by Fawcett Publications, Inc., Greenwich, Conn.; available from the publisher or some large hardware, building supplies dealers, newsstands.

TILE OVER WATERGLASS FLOOR?

Question: You recently advised waterglass treatment for a dusty, cement basement floor. My son has such a floor, but I seem to remember tile or paint can't be put over the waterglass. He wants to put down tile eventually but is now bothered with dust. What do you recommend as safer?

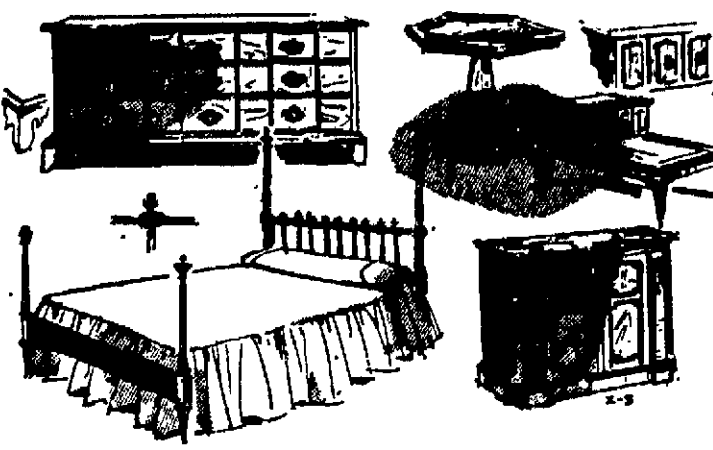

Answer: Waterglass will prevent good adhesion of paint afterwards. I suggest applying a liquid cement floor hardening preparation available at masonry supplies dealers; follow manufacturer's directions carefully.

Question: We have a white metal shower stall in a corner of our basement. The bottom is developing rust. Is there any way to refinish this?

Answer: A ceramic-like liquid tile is now available at some large paint, housewares and department stores. Follow manufacturer's instructions carefully. If not obtainable, try the following method: Clean all surfaces by rubbing down with a number one or two steel wool and turpentine. All rust must be removed. Then coat the metal with a rust-inhibitive paint. After allowing sufficient time for thorough drying, finish with a top quality water-resistant enamel.

Mahogany Furniture Winners Show Elegant Detail

The wealth of new mahogany furniture now seen in the stores looks new for both obvious and subtle reasons. Clearly, mahogany has been chosen for much of the handsomest furniture that has recently been introduced, and especially for that which makes beautiful wood and its distinctive graining part of furniture design. And the woods have a subtle added beauty that's explained by new methods of finishing. The natural, rich, light browns of mahogany are emphasized with newly refined finishing materials. Even the lightest finishes are achieved without bleaching.

These new finishes penetrate the deepest pores of the wood but are transparent. They do not lie on the surface as the old dark stains and heavy coatings did to cover both the natural light color and the delicacies of graining. And both the light color and the grainings and figures of mahogany are featured in furniture of all stylings. Winners in the Mahogany Association's second annual Fur-ture Design Competition include almost every style, among them Early American, Queen Anne, modern and distinctive period adaptations of great style that are as modern as they are traditional.

Sketched are award winners, the cabinet and bed from the Constitution grouping which won Century Furniture Company top honors in the bedroom classification. The two tables belong to the first award grouping called Contrada, by Brandt, which tied with American of Marinville for its Elite grouping. J. Gordon Perlmuter designed Contrada and Merton Gersbun Elite. The hall chest is among new additions to the Truene grouping by Drexel which won best of show last year and again won with thirty new pieces for correlated groups. Designers are Henry and David Warren.

Detailed sketches emphasize the elegance of design which helped to win these awards, and which makes investment in furniture today the satisfaction it has deservedly become.

No Fragrance Needed in Perfectly Formed Camellia

BY KATHERINE B. WALKER

In my opinion, the most perfectly formed flower is the formal double blossom of Camellia japonica. I think they are without peer, surpassing all other flowers in their precise beauty. I love them as tubed plants. I love to wear the blossoms and I love using them in arrangements. The fact that camellias seldom have any fragrance doesn't lessen their appeal to me in the least.

Admittedly, camellias are not for every indoor gardener. These glossy - leaved evergreens can be difficult, but I feel they are worth the extra trouble. And with a selection of plants, it is possible to have flowers from September to May.

Cool Quarters

Despite the delicate, exotic appearance of the flowers, camellias are fairly rugged plants and prefer to have cool quarters during the winter. A glass-enclosed porch is ideal, but often an unused, unheated room will be cool enough to suit them. Pot camellias in very rich, loose, humusy soil.

I start with a bag of African violet soil and add an equal amount of peatmoss to make an easily-drained, moisture-retaining, acid soil for them. These plants want to soil kept evenly moist and like to have the humidity high, so if the air is very dry, spray them often with tepid water and set the pots on pebble-trays if possible.

Many Variations In addition to the perfect formal double form, Japonicas are also available in single, semi-double, anemoneform, peoniform and rose form. Colors include every hue of pink and red plus pure white, and combinations of these colors in stripes, mottling, or edging. Reticulata is another species of camellia more tender and more tree-like in growth, with superb flowers. Also available are the Sasanquas, wonderful rugged plants, early blooming and only really fragrant camellias we know. These are the big three of the Camellia world.

Send for descriptive folders or catalogs, or look for camellias at your florist's, and I can almost guarantee that you'll buy as many plants as you have room for. Next year you may even add a glass-enclosed porch to your home to make room for more of them.

I saw a bromeliad tree at a flower show once, and I'd like to make one. How is this done?

A. Frankly, I'm not sure of the correct procedure, but mine is made from a rough - barked, branched log set upright in a big pan of stones. I bored holes in the log to take the roots of some plants. Plants with few or no roots I tied into place, covering their bases with sphagnum moss

Your Problems

Respectable Teens Entertain In Living Room, Ann Tells Girl

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is there anything wrong with a respectable, decent 16-year-old girl entertaining her boy friend in her bedroom with the door closed? I've gone steady with Orrin for over a year, so it isn't as if we hardly know each other. The reason I'm writing this letter is because my father complains about us closing the door.

I've told him a million times that we close the door (and sometimes lock it) because my bratty little sisters keep barging in.

Don't you think a girl is entitled to some privacy in her own home? My dad says he will listen to you. Please be on my side, Ann — Eloise

Dear Eloise: I am on your side and that's why I am telling you to entertain your boy friend in the living room.

It's up to your parents to keep the younger kids out of your hair when you have guests. You have a right to insist on it. On this I'll back you all the way.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister was invited to a rather fancy party last week and she asked if she could borrow my mink stole. I said yes.

A few days later my husband and I attended a dinner party and I wore my stole. A friend of mine said "I see you and Muriel have stoles exactly alike." I didn't set her straight because I didn't feel it was necessary to go into detail.

My husband overheard her remark and he knew at once that I hadn't mentioned it to him because it didn't seem important. He was furious and asked me never to lend my stole to Muriel again. He doesn't have anything against her but he can't stand her husband.

Do you feel a husband has the right to ask his wife not to lend her clothes? I think this is petty but I will do as you say — Unselfish

Dear Unselfish: Most husbands couldn't care less whether or not their wives lend their clothes. But since your husband has made it clear that he does care, you should respect his wishes.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I want to invite my boy friend to come home for dinner in a few weeks. It will be his 18th birthday and

Canadians Sell Grain to Reds

OTTAWA (AP)— Canada has completed its second grain deal with the communist bloc within a week, the sale of more than one million long tons to Red China. A third Iron Curtain sale is pending.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton announced that 750,000 tons of wheat and 250,000 tons of barley have been sold to Red China, which faces famine due to crop failures.

Canada sold 200,000 tons of wheat to Russia earlier this week. Negotiations also are in progress to sell an unannounced quantity of grain to Czechoslovakia.

Canada last sold wheat to Red China in 1958, when 425 million bushels were shipped there.

Most of the wheat to be shipped is Manitoba northern, a high quality grain that other major wheat exporters in the west do not produce.

I thought I'd bake a cake. The only thing holding me back is I am ashamed of his table manners.

Butch makes a lot of noise when he eats, and he talks with food in his mouth. He also holds the silverware in an odd way, puts his elbows on the table and mops the plate with his bread. My parents are pretty strict about manners and I'm afraid they'll turn thumbs down on Butch after watching him eat one meal. This hardly seems fair, but that's the way they are.

I like Butch a lot. He's a swell guy and is about the best-hearted fellow I've ever met. I've kidded him about his table manners but he doesn't seem to take the hint. What shall I do? — Julia

Dear Julia: If you care for the boy you can do him a favor. Stop kidding and tell him in plain English that he ought to do something about his table manners — and then be specific and tell him what he is doing wrong, and how to improve.

Poor table manners can be a life-long handicap. If he's the right kind of fellow he'll appreciate your interest.

Billy's Back So Family Can Have Christmas

GEORGETOWN, Ky. (AP)— For Billy Mefford, his family and friends, Saturday will be Christmas Day, complete with the tree and presents.

Billy, 13, was hit by a car while riding a sled three days before last Christmas.

For 35 days he was unconscious in a Lexington hospital. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Mefford, postponed their Christmas celebration.

Each day they squeezed his hand, saying, "Billy, if you hear my voice, squeeze my hand."

He returned the pressure 10 days ago. And Tuesday, he began to talk once again.

Billy is back home, recuperating from a broken leg and head injuries. A Christmas tree stands beside his bed.

Plasma Expander Not Equal To Transfusion of Real Blood

BY JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

The following letter disturbed me. I've decided to answer it rather than risk letting the idea be bandied around unchallenged.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What is your candid opinion of blood transfusions? With all the hidden dangers of transfusions, are they permitted when there is now on the market a manufactured substitute which gives the same results but without ill after effects or any danger?"

"All that is known to date is that blood must be of a certain type, but nothing is known of what serious outbreaks might come later—J.S."

Too many campaigns of this type are based on some knowledge of what is involved, but not all.

Element of Risk

True, there is an element of risk in blood transfusions. Transfusions should not be given casually or without good reason. The risk involved is small, and is becoming smaller day by day, but the presence of any risk is sufficient to warrant the use of transfusions only for adequate reasons.

The same is true of surgery. Every operation potentially carries some risk. But the risk of not operating is so much greater that there is no question as to what to do, operate when necessary!

The same, indeed, is true of any medication. Don't give any without a good reason. But always accept the small risk for the purpose of avoiding the greater one.

No Substitute

It decidedly is not true that a "manufactured substitute" for whole blood is available. "J.S." is referring to what is known as plasma expander, which is used primarily when a patient is in shock. It is not, as "J.S." mistakenly believes, given without risk. Although, again, the risk is small. Plasma expander is not a substitute for a transfusion of whole blood. The latter contains red blood cells by which the body transports oxygen, which is desperately needed when blood has to be given for certain anemia states. Whole blood provides albumin. It provides needed electrolytes—minerals in solution. It even provides some immediate nourishment from the modicum of blood sugar it contains.

These are absent from plasma expander.

Change Mind

In view of all this, I hope "J.S." will change his mind right away. But if any further argument is needed, all he has to do is weigh the one-in-a-thousand case of risk against the thousands-upon-thousands of lives which, in the last few years, would have been immediately forfeited without transfusions.

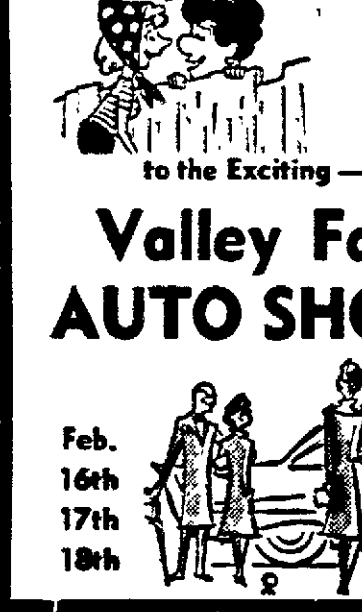

Indeed, by the same argument, he uses we would have to abandon a great many things which involve risk and can be shown to have caused injury and death: automobiles, stairways, curbstones, bathtubs, chicken bones, airplanes, railroad trains, horses, rugs on the floor, kitchen knives, lawnmowers. You name it.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have been advised that cranberry juice would cure bladder infection. How would it differ from lemon or grape juice?—Mrs. E. R."

I'm afraid this another home remedy that doesn't have much if any effect. Go to your doctor. He can use antibiotics. Drinking a lot of water—whether it has cranberry juice, lemon, or anything else, or nothing else in it—is important in clearing up bladder infections.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading my booklet "The Way To Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope, and 20 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Let's take a simple and common example. Your trump suit consists of K-J-10-9 in your own hand and A-7-6-5 in the dummy. Naturally, you plan to finesse for the queen.

Which Way?
Which way do you finesse? Do you lead the jack and let it ride for a finesse? Or do you lead to dummy's ace and finesse back in the other direction?

To the uninitiated, this looks like a guess, pure and simple. You have to guess which opponent has the queen, and then you finesse through that opponent.

There is guesswork in it, but it isn't simple and it's far from pure. A beginner will guess right about 50 per cent of the time because he's just guessing. An expert will capture the queen at last 80 per cent of the time, because he has more than guesswork to guide him.

The expert knows people.

Weak Opponents

Let's suppose you're playing against your Aunt Tillie and one of her lady friends. They play bridge once a month, and think it's almost as refined a game as euchre. If you misguess a queen against these opponents you'd better take up tiddlywinks.

The proper play is to lead the jack of trumps and wait for a reaction. If Aunt Tillie wavers and doesn't know quite what to do, she has the queen of trumps and is trying to remember whether the rule says "Cover an honor" or "Don't cover." By the time she has made up her mind, you know where the queen is and have no further problem.

The reverse is equally important. If your Aunt Tillie plays a low trump without the slightest sign of being flustered, she doesn't have the queen. Go up with dummy's ace and take your finesse in the other direction.

Good Opponents

If your opponents are very experienced you won't get your information quite so easily. You can

Parsnip Recipe

Cut cooked parsnips into strips and brown in butter, adding a sprinkling of sugar.

As long as we were already involved in the building of a new bedroom wing, it seemed to me an excellent time to undertake long postponed remodeling of the living room. John agreed — rather reluctantly — to the building of book cases and a shelf over the sofa for more books, hric-a-brac and the like. I was elated, for books seem to overflow our house and pile up like wind-swept leaves into the corners. It was decided that Mr. Murdock, our very capable carpenter, and John would do this work in their spare time.

This was a fine idea, but it soon developed that neither John nor Mr. Murdock had any spare time. I kept after them both about matter with our Japanese tea kit for weeks and got nothing but vague promises. As any woman knows, this sort of situation can be very wearing on the nerves.

Cleans For Company

On Friday morning I undertook a thorough cleaning of the living room. The Grays before the company arrived. "A and the Sturgeons over to see our great improvement," he said. "It shines of the Grand Canyon that looks fine."

I thought it looked fine too. I had moved the lamp so that shadow stood in the center of the room, over the crumbling plaster and the extra nail holes. They were looking at it with a little impatience. "Shelf over the sofa?" Mr. Mur-

Housewife Assumes Role of Carpenter

By Jeannette Griffith

all the time John was showing me the slides I dreamed about my future sorties into the field of carpentry. After I had done the book shelves I might start on a plate cupboard for the dining room.

The next morning Mr. Murdock came to the front door to get the sander he had loaned John. John gave him the tool. "Say, Murdock, I want to thank you for getting the shelf up over the sofa. It looks great. Jeannie was beginning to get a little impatient over it."

"Shelf over the sofa?" Mr. Murdock said looking around at it in surprise.

Reveals Truth
I beamed at them proudly. "I didn't have a chance to tell you, John. It wasn't Mr. Murdock. I put it up all by myself."

"Great Scott," John said tersely. He and Mr. Murdock stared at the shelf, at me and at each other. Simultaneously they moved across the room and began unloading the books and the iron tea kettle.

"It's just hanging in the plaster," Mr. Murdock said wonderingly. "It's a miracle it stayed up 10 minutes."

"It's a miracle, Jim Gray and I weren't brained," John said. "We sat under the thing all evening."

"I thought I did rather well," I said defensively. "I planned to start on the book cases next."

"Heaven forbid!" Mr. Murdock muttered fervently.

As it happened, though everything turned out all right, for both he and John discovered that they had a complete spare week-end, and now the living room is all finished according to my original plan.

NEXT WEEK: A big pitch for a Valentine prize.

SEAMS TO ME

By Patricia Scott

The fantastic amount of money a prospective bride finds she must spend should not put a damper on wedding plans. Let's face it, she just has to have an elegant trousseau — practical or not — and her wedding dress, short or long, must be the living end. So where do you cut corners?

One, and a mighty expensive corner at that, is the head piece. For just a few dollars you can make it yourself. There is very little sewing involved and all of it is done by hand. So, whether you're a polished seamstress or a person who makes a little something now and then, you can do it easily.

You'll need: 1 yard of 35-inch veil or 35-inch lace; or if you prefer, 1/2 yard 54-inch net; 1 yard of 1-inch wide ribbon; sprig of artificial flowers.

To make pattern (figure 3): Cut a rectangle 27" x 10". Mark the center of the rectangle center person who makes a little something now and then, you can do it easily.

To make: Stitch the veil to all over lace or 54-inch net; 1/2 long side. This is now the top of a circle 17 inches from center to edge. Then draw a small circle gathers up as shown in figure 4.

To make: Pin one long edge of the ribbon along the stitching line (fig. 2). Turn one end of ribbon over the other. This will be the center back. Now slip stitch the two ribbon ends together. Sew the pinned ribbon edge to the veil with tiny invisible stitches.

Pin the other long edge of ribbon to the veil, easing it to fit as you pin. Then sew the ribbon to the veil with tiny invisible stitches. Now, simply tack the crown to the ribbon securely.

Here's an idea for the maid of honor or bridesmaid who can't find that perfect headpiece for her dress.

Nelson Signs Law Creating Third Outagamie Court

First Law of Session in Effect;
New Judge Takes Office in May

MADISON (AP)—The first law of the 1961 legislative session went into effect today, creating new county court branches in Dodge, La Crosse, Outagamie and Racine counties.

Gov. Gaylord Nelson signed the law Friday after dispatching a state patrolman to obtain the necessary signatures from legislative officers.

(Outagamie County Corporation Counsel Raymond P. Dohr said today he will run for the judgeship. Circulation papers can be circulated beginning Sunday.)

The law will give new judges to Dodge, Outagamie and Racine counties this year. Candidates must have their nomination papers in by Feb. 10, a deadline extended 10 days to cover these posts.

Winners in the April election will take office in May.

La Crosse County will not get its new judge until after the spring election next year.

The law provides for two additional branches in Racine County with one of the additional judges to travel throughout the western part of the county.

A third judge is provided in Outagamie County. Dodge and La Crosse each get a second court branch.

The additional court branches were recommended by the State Judicial Council on the basis of population growth and court workload.

Committee Can't Agree to Port Requests

Following Jordan
Would Usurp Board
Powers, Staffeld Says

OSHKOSH—The aviation committee would be usurping county board powers if it carried out some requests made to it by T. K. Jordan, state aeronautics commission director, Supv. Alvin Staffeld, Neenah, aviation committee chairman, says.

Jordan wrote the committee asking it to concur in awarding contracts by the state commission to low bidders for the flight control tower.

Staffeld said Friday he saw no reason why the committee should take action because the commission has the attorney general's opinion it cannot reject the bids on the basis the tower might be built on the wrong site.

He also referred to an opinion by Dist. Atty. Jack Steinhilber, which stated the county board has taken all actions necessary for the state aeronautics commission to act.

Chairman Joseph Drexler of the county board, aviation committee secretary, said, "but I don't see where we need to take action."

A letter will be sent to the commission but only to the effect that the bids for the flight control tower as listed by the commission's office were the same as those listed by the committee when the bids were opened, or, as Supv. Elmer Steinhilber, Oshkosh, put it, "to show that their adding machine tapes agree with ours."

Jordan's request to have the committee ask Gov. Nelson and State Sen. William A. Draheim to withdraw their requests for a delay in the project pending the joint airport study also came in for discussion.

Staffeld said he did not think such a letter was right and that it was unnecessary.

Reds Step Up Activity On Lithuania Catholics

VATICAN CITY (AP)—L'Osservatore Romano said Friday Soviet authorities have stepped up measures against the Roman Catholic Church in Lithuania.

The Vatican newspaper said recent actions against the church by Communist authorities included the confinement of Msgr. Julius Steponavicius, titular bishop of Antardano and spiritual leader of Lithuanian Roman Catholics in Panevezys and Vilna.

Hit Parked Car

Three Injured in Separate Crashes

An 18-year old Menasha youth and a passenger in the car he was driving were injured at 11:20 p.m. Friday when the car skidded out of control and smashed into a parked car in the 1200 block of E. Fremont Street.

Juris Meimanis, 18, 411 Pine St., Menasha, received a possible broken rib and collar bone and possible internal injuries. Bernard J. Shukoski, 17, 206 Racine St., Menasha, received a deep cut over his right eye.

Meimanis told police he was traveling east on Fremont Street and was driving close to the curb to avoid ice in the middle of the road. He apparently pulled out to go around the car, then started to skid.

The injured youths were taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in a private car and are in good condition today, hospital authorities said.

Mrs. Daniel Ponschock, 34, 829 W. Spring St., received a deep cut to her forehead and injuries to her knees, elbows, right ankle and foot in a two-car collision at

The New Planetarium Mechanism in the University of Wisconsin Fox Valley Center was examined by Supv. and Mrs. Ivan Dunbar, of Seymour's First Ward, at Friday night's showing of the new machine. The large ball projects beams of light in planets' exact positions to the inside of the dome.

Value of Astronomy Noted at Showings

MENASHA — Astronomy is the basic science, because it was the first to arouse primitive man's curiosity. It caused him to look upward — outside himself — and to question.

On that premise the present day study of astronomy is based, said Herbert Williams, sales representative of Spitz Laboratories, Inc., Yorklyn, Del., at Friday night's two showings of the new planetarium at the University of Wisconsin Fox Valley Center.

Williams showed city and Outagamie and Winnebago county officials how the planetarium machinery can help the university center teach geography and higher mathematics, as well as astronomy.

Importance Since '57 Outer space and its contents, Williams pointed out, have taken on a vital meaning since 1957 when the Russians launched the world's first artificial satellite.

Primitive man soon realized all energy came from the sun and crops and life depended upon it. The result was that man began worshipping the sun as a life-giving object, he said.

"We are doing about the same thing now," Williams went on. Today's "temples" are not of marble or precious metals, but are the schools where research on space is being carried out. "The United States is dedicated to a space program," he said.

Other showings, open to the public, are at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. today at the center on Midway Road.

Hearing Tuesday On Black Creek School Request

SEYMOUR — Residents along the western edge of Black Creek Elementary School District have petitioned Outagamie County School Committee to attach them to Seymour Union High School District. The petition will be considered at a public hearing at the Seymour school at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The area is served by Black Creek Grade School. Area residents want to be served for high school purposes by the Seymour district, the petition says. The area is in Shiocton High School District, which currently is in the process of consolidating its territory.

Most of the territory in the Black Creek district has been served by Seymour several years. Both the Seymour and Shiocton districts have had surveys made by the state department of public instruction. The state, in both instances, has suggested district reorganization.

The committee also has power to deny the petition and attach the area to Shiocton for all school purposes. Shiocton has a union high school district, but is working on plans for an integrated district. Representatives of the Shiocton, Seymour and Black Creek districts are expected to attend.

Replaces English Once Weekly

2nd Kaukauna Grade School Offers Spanish

KAUKAUNA — Plans are being made to begin a class in Spanish at Park School. Another class already is in operation at Nicolet School, Clifford Hodgins, elementary school supervisor, said.

Eighth graders at Park School have taken forms home on which parents may indicate approval of Spanish on an experimental basis one day per week. The class will replace one English class per week. Instructor will be Karl Conrad, Park School faculty member who studied three years of Spanish in college.

Of Stored Hay

WINNECONNE — Fire at the Charles King farm yesterday afternoon destroyed a 20 by 80-foot barn, 21 head of cattle and the barn's contents. The farm is located on the west side of the Town of Winneconne.

The amount of the loss has not been determined. The loss includes 70 tons of hay, a combine, corn binder and silo filler.

King said he had been in the barn about 3:30 p.m. and left it to go to the house. Ten minutes later he heard a cracking sound and noticed the northwest corner of the barn was blazing. He called the Winneconne-Poygan Fire Department and then rushed out to the barn. He managed to get out 16 head of cattle.

The fire department serving the city and town of Omro and the towns of Rushford and Winneconne also sent two trucks to join the two from Winneconne. Firemen remained until midnight. Several stayed overnight to keep watch over the smoldering ruins. The loss, King said, was only partially covered by insurance.

Signs Point to Upturn in U. S. Economic Trend

Kennedy Appears Ready to Attack Inflation Problem

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy's latest message to congress on the economic situation is in some respects the most important he has yet delivered. For it affords an insight into the kind of policies he intends to sponsor in the field of business.

The first part of the message is mostly theory. Who knows, for instance, what the national growth might have been in the last few years if the economy had realized its "possible" expansion? Who can say just why there has been "a failure to use our full capacity"? Kennedy says, for instance, that corporate profits "could have been 5 billion dollars higher" than they were in 1960. But he doesn't tell how this could have been done in the face of declining business due to the after-effects of the steel strike.

In general terms, the president proposes now "to expand the nation's investments in physical and human resources, and in science and technology."

Worthy Ideal

This is a worthy ideal, but the question of just how to do it isn't covered in the message. There is one point, however, which may afford a clue. The president, for instance, says pointedly that "long-term interest rates should decline" and that "a further decline in short-term interest rates, under present conditions, would lead to a further outflow of funds abroad."

This means that Kennedy recognizes how much the international economy has become interwoven with the national economy and that artificially to depress interest rates within the United States might be good politics in one sense but can wreck the gold position of America by forcing foreign holders of money to transfer their funds to Europe, where they'll get higher interest rates.

'Pump Priming'

Although the message contains many proposals for "pump priming" which are reminiscent of the blunders of new deal days, there are certain items suggested that are necessary to alleviate immediate distress which are commendable.

It is in the long-range category — what shall be done to lift the economy out of its present downturn — that the president has made a very significant suggestion. He has not described in detail his recommendation for what are termed "special tax incentives" to bring about "expansion and modernization of the nation's productive plant," but the fact that he recommends a modification of the tax laws to provide those "incentives for investment in plant and equipment" is highly important.

Price Stability

Most interesting of all, however, is the carefully phrased statement of the president about inflation and price stability. He says: "Government can help further by encouraging labor and management to find ways to smooth the adjustment to technological change."

"Accordingly, I shall issue an executive order establishing the president's advisory committee on labor-management policy, with members drawn from labor, management, and the public."

"The committee is directed to advise the president with respect to actions that may be taken by labor, management, and the public which will promote free and responsible collective bargaining, for the Garuda (Indonesian Air-industrial peace, sound wage policies, sound price policies and stability, a higher standard of living, increased productivity, and America's competitive position in world markets."

"I look to the committee to make an important contribution to labor-management relations and an understanding of their importance to the stability of prices and the health of the economy."

"All of us must now be conscious of the need for policies that enable American goods to compete successfully with foreign goods. We cannot afford unsound wage and price movements which push up costs, weaken our international competitive position, restrict job opportunities, and jeopardize the health of our domestic economy."

Cost of Living

"Neither will we seek to buy short-run economic gains by paying the price of excessive increases in the cost of living. Always a cruel tax upon the weak, inflation is now the certain road to a balance of payments crisis and the disruption of the international economy of the Western world."

Does all this mean that irresponsibility in labor unions is at last to be tackled? The steel strike, with its dislocation of inventories, was one of the major causes of the present recession, and yet labor leaders have shown no sign of abating their demand to get all

Proper Equipment is an important part in any safety program and these Fox Cities people attending the Wisconsin Mid-Winter Safety Conference in Milwaukee took a good look at some of the items on display. At top, Paul Dodge, Neenah, of Neenah Foundry Co., and Robert W. Wood, Neenah, Kimberly-Clark Corp., inspect a helmet modeled by Miss Betty Schneider, Appleton, of Gilbert Paper Co., Neenah. Red Countries Finish Fitting Guinea Army

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP)—Iron Curtain countries have completely equipped the 2,000-man Guinea army, but it's a question just how effective President Sekou Toure's soldiers could be.

Guinean officials are secretive about their new army but insist "it is not an aggressive instrument."

Most of the armament has come from Czechoslovakia. Guineans argue that they accepted it only when the United States turned down their request for arms in 1960.

There are indications that the Reds have supplied more than enough equipment for a 2,000-man force.

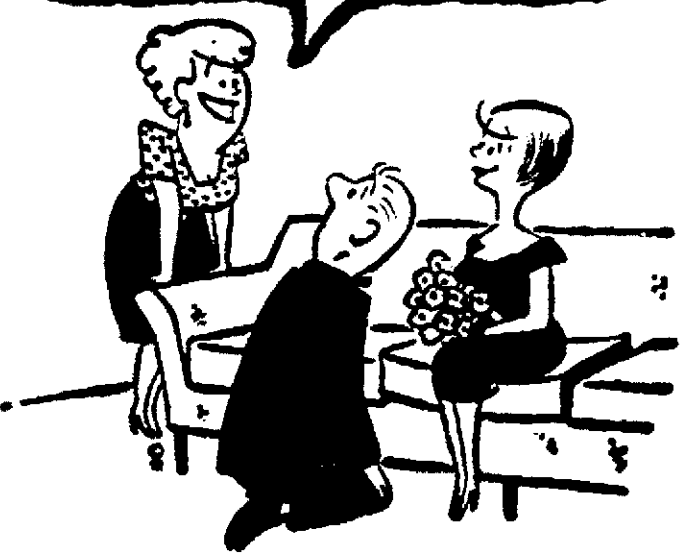

The equipment is known to include a number of 105 m.m. howitzers, 75 m.m. antiaircraft guns, 57 m.m. antitank guns and machine guns. By Western standards, the equipment is almost all outdated.

Aviation Group Seeks Talks About Highway

City of Oshkosh
Planning to Annex
Near County Airport

OSHKOSH—Aviation committee members Friday decided to seek a meeting with the County Board's highway committee to discuss re-routing state 26 to permit future extension of the north-south runway.

The City of Oshkosh has been considering annexations along Oregon Street. The state highway department has been thinking of improvement work on state 26, probably three years from now.

Any rerouting of the highway should be done first, even though no steps are taken for a while on any extension of the north-south runway, committee members thought.

Receive One Bid

One bid was received for a door for the 20th Avenue hangar used by Basler Flight Service. The committee voted to award the contract to the Mosher Manufacturing Co., Inc., Minneapolis, for a 58½- by 14-foot 9-inch metal door at a cost of $5,285.

The highway department will be asked to install the door. Another $50 was thought sufficient for the labor, bringing the total estimated cost to $5,785, which is under the $6,000 authorized by the board for the project.

Warren Basler, operator of the flight service at the airport, called the committee's attention to a possible hazard existing at the Standard Kohlman Co. plant southeast of the airport.

Outside lights at the plant are lined up so that they might be mistaken for runway lights.

Agreement Read

An agency agreement with the state aeronautics commission was read. The state will handle securing of plans and specifications for the taxiway project, apron expansion and additional fencing.

Plans for the taxiway and apron expansion are to be developed by Auler Corp., Oshkosh, as consulting engineers, the state commission indicated.

Electric Power Undergoes Big Change in State

Steam Generation
Increases in Use
During Last 10 Years

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A revolution in the electric power industry of the state has been quietly proceeding during the last decade.

Where once hydro-electric power generation was an important industry and water power for electrical generation was regarded as a vital asset, steam generation has rapidly increased in importance until today it represents about 90 per cent of all the kilowatts produced in the state.

Trends are recited in the annual report of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission, the state regulatory authority.

The proportionate contribution of hydro-power in the state has been halved in the last 10 years, it was shown.

Cost Factor

Cost of production is the most important factor in the gradually increasing reliance upon steam power generation.

Generation by Diesel power remains a minor factor in the utility industry of the state as a whole, it was shown.

Investment in electric service plants in the state, meanwhile, continues to increase by huge bounds.

The total now is around a billion dollars the commission estimates, or about twice the total of 10 years ago and about two and one half times the aggregate worth of plant 20 years ago. In the last 20 years the generating capacity of steam plants rose from less than 1 million kilowatts to more than 3 million, while the capacity of water power and diesel plants remained almost stationary.

Thieves Take 8th Grade's Party Funds

BIRNAMWOOD — Burglars who stole money from classrooms at Birnamwood High School also robbed the eighth grade of a Valentine party.

Seventh and eighth grade classes lost a total of $60 in club dues and basketball concession receipts when burglars entered a window in the seventh grade room sometime Thursday night. The breakin was discovered Friday morning.

Several other rooms also were entered, but nothing was reported missing. The seventh grade part of the loot had been saved to give the eighth grade a party next week.

Robert Doege, Seventh grade teacher, reported losing his school keys Wednesday. The rooms entered matched keys on the teacher's key ring. However, the burglars forced the eighth grade class door.

Sheriff Carl Krueger is investigating the burglary.

Failure Likely For Proposal For Teachers

Would Require
4-Year Degree
To Teach in State

MADISON (AP)—A proposal to require all elementary school teachers in Wisconsin to have a four-year college degree by 1963 is expected to get a less-than-passing grade in its course through the 1961 Legislature.

Sponsored by Assemblymen Henry Hillemann, D-Sheboygan, and Frank Nikolay, D-Abbotsford, the bill is supported by most state educators as a means to raise the recognized low standards of some state elementary schools.

There are in Wisconsin 7,292 of 19,847 elementary teachers—more than 35 per cent—who do not have the four-year bachelor's degree.

State Ranks Low

Because Wisconsin grants elementary teaching licenses to graduates of two-year college courses, it ranks in the lower quarter of the states in elementary teacher preparation, according to Russell F. Lewis, first assistant state superintendent of schools.

Wisconsin high school teachers receiving their licenses since 1939 have been required to hold a four-year degree, Lewis pointed out.

The legislative council turned down in November of 1960 an effort to make the same requirements apply to elementary teachers.

Rural Opposition

Most of the opposition comes from rural areas where many teachers without degrees are in nearly 2,000 one-room school houses.

Lewis said most of these elementary school teachers are in the process of getting a four-year college degree.

Lewis emphasized that Wisconsin has made progress in raising teacher education levels since 1949, when only 29 per cent of the state's elementary teachers had four-year degrees.

Clints Weather Late Bulldog Rally to Win

64 to 63 Triumph
Gives Truckers
Fifth Place in M-E

CLINTONVILLE — Clintonville's Truckers led by 17 points after three quarters here Friday night but barely managed to escape with a 64-63 basketball victory over New London.

The triumph broke a fifth place tie between the winners and losers in the Mid-Eastern Conference. The Bulldogs dropped to sixth place.

Greeley Herres

Dick Bennett and George Greeley led the victors, scoring 14 points each before they were disqualified on fouls. Mike Herres collected 20 and Dick Emerich 16 to top the Bulldogs.

Clintonville raced to a gaping 19-2 first quarter lead and was ahead, 36-17, at the half. The Truckers shot 49 per cent, the Bulldogs 26 per cent in the first half.

Still on Top

Clintonville was still on top, 51-34, at the end of three periods. The Bulldogs cut it to 59-53 with 1:31 to go. The victors stalled, New London fouled and Wes Peters dropped in three free throws within a 5-second span for a 62-59 lead.

Dan Laux made his only goal of the game at 1:06 to shave it to 62-60. The Truckers' Tom Polzin poured in a pair of free throws at :54 for a 64-60 lead. Bennett's fifth foul enabled Don Harold to cut the score to 64-61 with 44 seconds to go.

Mike Herres' basket with about 10 seconds left sliced the margin to one point but the victors stalled out the win.

Clintonville posted a 42-32 rebounding edge in the game, mainly on the basis of a strong first half's work. Clintonville won the game on the foul line, making four fewer goals than the visitors.

The Truckers hit 24 of 41 foul shots, New London made 15 for 23. Clintonville shot .408 from the floor (20 for 49) to the losers .421 on 24 for 57.

The Bulldogs shot 55 per cent in the second half to Clintonville's 27.

KAUKAUNA — An alert Kaukauna High School basketball team scrapped for a full 32 minutes Friday night and upset highly-favored Kimberly, 38-32, before a packed gym of stunned Papermakers fans and wild Ghost rooters.

For Kimberly, it was the third Mid-Eastern Conference loss in a row after the Papermakers had won seven straight. The Ghosts are now 2-8.

Kaukauna used much the same type tactics that Clintonville did in defeating the Papermakers last week. The Ghosts worked the ball continually just inside the center line with the guards, Dennis Priebe and Ken Kavanaugh, doing most of the ball handling along with forward Mike Reardon. John Robedeaux and Steve Mayer were stationed in the corners, leaving the center lane open.

Work For Opening

The Ghosts worked around until an opening developed and then either drove down the center lane for a layup or passed in to a player cutting for the bucket.

The result was that Kaukauna got practically all of its 10 baskets on layups and the hard driving down the lane brought 20 Papermaker fouls. The Ghosts hit 18 of 31 charity attempts for the winning margin as Kimberly had 11 field goals to 10 for the Ghosts.

Kaukauna led throughout the game with the exception of the opening minute when Tom Rooyakker's free throw gave Kimberly a 1-0 advantage and again in the early part of the fourth period when the Papermakers caught up and held a 27-26 lead for just seconds.

The last quarter was hectic, and the wild screaming of fans clapped like thunder. The Papermakers trailed, 23-13, at halftime but hit 10 points in the third quarter.
